His Record Severe On Jewish Problem

Goering's Ruling Brings Warning of Prison for Priests.

By the United Press.

Berlin, July 18. — Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler tonight stepped into his Nazi government's campaign against the Jews and the Catholic Church by creating a cabinet post to deal with religious matters.

Faced by intensified anti-Jewish activities and Gen. Herman Goering's decrees against the clergy, Hitler appointed Hans Kerrl minister without portfolio in charge of all church matters.

His appointment was regarded as highly significant since it followed so closely the Prussian premier's decrees.

Kerrl's Actions Drastic.

When he was Prussian minister of justice Kerrl purged his department of non-Aryan elements. His rulings were much more drastic than any federal law condoning "religious persecution."

Germany warned the Catholic Church that if it continues to oppose Hitler's program for the building of a Teuton super-state some, at least, of its organizations will be disbanded.

The warning coincided with intensified attacks upon Jews and was interpreted as bringing Hitler nearer direct conflict with the Vatican.

"The church must not invoke God against this state—a monstrosity we have witnessed in open or veiled form every Sunday," Gen. Hermann Goering, Reich air minister and Prussian premier, said.

American Agent Seized.

M. C. Harbeck, of New York, Switzerland agent of the American Watch Tower and Bible Tract Society and the International Bible Students Association, was arrested by German secret police today.

He was held in the secret police prison charged with attempting to remove from Germany Watch Tower Society money under attachment at Magdeburg.

United States Consul Douglas Jenkins communicated with the prisoner and reported to the State Department in Washington.

Harbeck is a resident of Berne, Switzerland. He had been in Germany only a few days after returning to Europe from the United States, where he attended the International Bible Association Congress under Judge Joseph Frederick Rutherford at Washington.

In addition to being charged with attempt to remove attached Magdeburg funds from Germany, Harbeck was charged with attempting to circulate the Golden Age in the Reich.

Golden Age Banned.

The Golden Age is the official organ of the International Bible students Association. It has been banned because authorities claim it repeatedly attacked Germany's Nazi regime.

European editions of the publications were printed in German at Berne.

Simultaneously drastic measures were taken against Jews to keep them from intimate relations with Aryans and even ban them from public bathing beaches.

As chief of the secret police Goering charged a part of the Catholic clergy is engaged in systematic, political opposition to the Third Reich.

He decreed that the authorities "must apply every legal means against members of the clergy misusing their authority in favor of political ends."

He threatens to disband the Catholic youth organizations unless they reform completely their present program, which he said is increasingly political instead of purely religious. He said only official and Nazi youth organizations are en-

Selassie Defies Might of Italy, Calls for Fight to Last Man

Scenes of Barbaric Splendor Attend Emperor's Address to Parliament; Islam Subjects Pledge Aid in Defending Freedom.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, July 18.—Emperor Haile Selassie, "Conquering Lion of Judah and King of Kings," today unsheathed Ethiopia's sword, discarded the scabbard and called upon his people to give to their last drop of blood to perpetuate their country's 37 centuries of independence.

Addressing parliament in a scene of barbarous splendor, he challenged Premier Benito Mussolini and cried:

"I am ready to die with you—my people."

"Ethiopia knows how to fight to preserve her independence and sovereignty.

"Our soldiers will follow the example of their warrior ancestors. Soldiers, traders, peasants, young and old, men and women are united to face the invader.

"God will be our rampart and our shield. Your sovereign, in your midst, will not hesitate to spill his blood for the independence of Ethiopia."

Before addressing his parliament the emperor mustered for an impressive parade one squadron of 4,000 men in the imperial guard while their officers swore fidelity to their ruler and laws of the fatherland.

The emperor and little Prince Makonnen, Duke of Harrar, appeared in full field uniform mounted on magnificent Arab chargers.

From mountain plateaus and torrid lowlands Haile Selassie's faithful subjects gathered for Parliament. All sound was hushed when the emperor rose in the royal box, on a level with the galleries. In a field uniform of khaki with cloak he faced the dais on which bowed the president of the assembly. Prince Makonnen II stood at the emperor's side.

The floor of the house was packed. Senators and deputies pushed close together, making space for soldiers and employes.

The galleries were crowded with church dignitaries, the war minister in field uniform, new army officers and representatives of the public and press.

All faces were turned toward the royal box. The intense, dead silence was disturbed only by a general rustle when the emperor mentioned Britain's efforts to maintain peace.

Then there was a sudden, hoarse murmur when Haile Selassie de-

Political Crisis Held Inevitable By Bar Group

New Deal Sidesteps Debt Problem, Committee at Convention Says.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 18.—A prediction that a "political crisis can not long be deferred on the existing major points of contact between the Government and the people," was carried to the American Bar Association today by its committee on commercial law and bankruptcy.

The committee stated it was the "present policy of the Government to escape coming to grips with the excess debt problem and through the expedience of moratoria and conciliations to move the crisis point along through gradual steps to the indefinite future, adding:

"If the inherent recuperative powers of the country, which have not failed in the past, should bring about recovery, these policies will be vindicated."

In its conclusions, the committee stated that "the steady, almost unperceived march toward collectivism in the management of wealth, debtor and creditor relations, and dependency status, will either compel amendments to the Constitution to unleash the present currents and trends from further restraint or some effective means for the preservation of constitutional government on the traditional American plan will be wrought out."

"A fair and intelligent analysis of this picture will lead to the inevitable conclusion that the scal-

Relief Survey For '36 Hints Lack of Jobs

Action Indicates That More Funds Must Be Voted.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Apparently resigned to an unemployment problem for several years more, at least, President Roosevelt yesterday directed his relief aids to commence studies at once to determine the sum needed to take care of the jobless during the fiscal year which starts July 1, 1936.

The President's action, coming 11½ months before the new fiscal year, and when a start has hardly been made toward spending the $4,000,000,000 works fund appropriated by this session of Congress, came as a jolt to many persons. It gave substance to the view held by some officials that $3,000,000,000 or $4,000,000,000 would have to be appropriated by the next Congress to handle the unemployment problem.

Instructions to begin the preparation of estimates for work-relief appropriations for the next session of Congress came a few minutes before Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administration, set November 15 as the date when Federal relief payments would cease, 3,500,000 persons would be at work under the new program and about 1,500,000 unemployables would be turned over to the care of the States and local communities.

Only 15,000 on Rolls.

Hopkins revealed that aside from increases in the CCC, only 15,000 persons were on the work rolls of the new program at the end of its first week, July 7. He added to this figure 300,000 CCC workers employed since last year and 88,000 CCC workers enrolled in the last few months to make a total of 403,000 persons at work under the program. He predicted the figure would be 875,000 by August 15.

Meanwhile Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes announced he had halted all work on PWA projects in Lounsiana and that no further applications for such projects would be considered there because of legislation seeking to impose State regulation over expenditure of the Federal funds.

It was a blow aimed directly at Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, whose criticism of the Roosevelt Administration has been relentless. But Ickes held that Long's attacks on the Administration had nothing to do with his orders to stop work on PWA projects.

Ickes explained he could not acquiesce in a law adopted by the last session of the Louisiana Legislature which would give State agencies, controled by Long, certain supervisory and jurisdictional rights over PWA projects. He pointed out that he had resisted such action when it was attempted in Massachusetts two years ago.

"Can Go to Hell," Says Long.

Long was on his way to Washington from New Orleans last night after asserting that the President and Ickes could "go slap damn to hell." He sent word to Senate colleagues that he would take the Senate floor today to discuss "issues of the day." It was believed he would deal at length with the Administration's new blow at him, although he will be restricted by the time limitation in effect on debate until passage of the AAA amendments.

The President proposed that

THE HOUSE.

Order, Please!

A DEMOCRAT had the floor in the House of Representatives. The sun beat through the seals of the 48 States set in the leaded glass roof. The Speaker strove to make himself heard. Now go on with the Associated Press observer in the gallery:

"The House will be in order," Speaker Byrns said, beating a heavy gavel. He twisted the gold rings on each of his third fingers. "The House, please, will be in order," he said, pounding.

Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, fanned herself with a Chinese fan. Representative Patman, of Texas, his hands full of papers, walked into the House, looked about, marched down the center aisle on the blue carpet, and walked out another door. Five Georgia Congressmen sat down on a back row and began to talk and laugh. On the Republican side, Representative Fish, of New York, sat on the table used by Representative Snell, of New York. He tore accounts from a newspaper. A page handed a card to Mrs. Greenway, of Arizona, who left the floor. Representative Rayburn, of Texas, yawned, stood up, stretched himself and sat down. Mrs. Kahn, of California, came in and stood in the aisle to talk to Mrs. Rogers, of Massachusetts. There was a gardenia pinned on Mrs. Kahn's blue dress. Mrs. Rogers put on horn-rimmed glasses and read her mail. Doughton, of North Carolina, his glasses resting on his forehead, walked over to where McSwain, of South Carolina, was sitting and whispered in his ear. Blanton, of Texas, chewing gum, spoke to a group and left the chamber. Delegate Delgado, of the Philippines, wandered about in his white trousers and a pale pink coat.

"The gentleman's time has expired," said the Speaker.

Lobby Probe May Involve Utility Chiefs

Holding Firm Books Are Studied to See How $700,000 Went.

By James D. Secrest.

The Senate lobby committee's investigation of the destruction of 1,300 telegrams sent to members of Congress from Warren, Pa., yesterday began to take on a broader aspect that will encompass the efforts of the Associated Gas & Electric Co to defeat the Wheeler-Rayburn bill by inspiring telegraphic protests throughout the country.

After two subordinate executives of the Utility Investing Corporation, a subsidiary of A. G. & E., reluctantly admitted that orders had been sent all branch managers in their territory to destroy all records relating to the lobbying campaign, Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the Senate committee, immediately subpenaed their chief.

Black also revealed that committee investigators were examining the books of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. in New York City to ascertain how the admitted $700,000 assessment was spent and hinted that the inquiry might be carried upward until the officials of the holding company are involved.

Erie Manager Testifies.

As E. W. O'Brien, Erie manager of the Utility Investing Corporation, informed the committee that a meeting of the security sales office managers in 26 States had been called to Ithaca, N. Y., in March to map a campaign of war on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, committee members indicated they would extend the inquiry into other States beyond Pennsylvania.

Senator Black said he received a telegram from the Consumers League of York, Pa., charging that thousands of fake telegrams had originated there. He said the committee's aids would investigate.

"If the Associated Gas & Electric Co. admits spending $700,000 to fight the Wheeler-Rayburn bill after destroying many of their records," Senator Black said, "it is likely that they actually spent several million dollars."

He expressed the opinion that the aggregate amount spent by utilities to defeat the "death clause" of the bill would run "way up in the millions of dollars."

Yesterday's witnesses were O'Brien and R. P. Herron, the bond salesman, whose instructions to get 1,000 telegrams opposing the utility bill led to the current inquiry.

Today their superior, U. E. Beach, of Ithaca, will be the principal witness.

Witnesses Reluctant.

Only by much prodding were the committee members able to wring from the witnesses the admission that they had been instructed to destroy all files relating to the lobby campaign so that the records might not be seized by Federal investigators for examination by the congressional lobby committees.

O'Brien, florid faced and rotund, reiterated there was nothing more incriminating in the files than newspaper advertisements and editorials, and form telegraph messages.

Asked what he told his subordinates when he hastily carried out Beach's instructions to "clear his files," O'Brien said:

"I told them something might be made of nothing if the files were not cleared out."

He admitted that this was the first time in his seven years with the corporation that he had called up his aids on the telephone and instructed them to destroy any records. Not only did he call Herron, but he likewise ordered subordinates in a half-dozen towns and cities in his territory to "clear their files."

O'Brien's memory was vague about his conversation with Beach until Black severely cross-examined him. At first he said that Beach had advised him to "clear his files"

Bill to Bar Suits On U. S. Bonds Voted by House

Gold Bill Ban Extended to Exempt All Government Securities.

Railroad Must Pay Bonds at $1.69 Rate

Federal Court Upholds Demands of European Creditor.

By Robert C. Albright.

While a New York Federal judge ordered a railroad to pay the gold equivalent of its bond coupons, the House yesterday by a 258 to 88 vote passed the Administration gold bill, closing the doors of the courts to dollar-devaluation suits against the Government.

House action was taken over Republican cries of "repudiation" and "deadbeat legislation." Designed to debar suits for recovery of the full ($1.69) gold value of Federal gold-clause securities, the House bill in effect is more sweeping. It denies the right of suit in all cases where Government obligations to pay money are involved.

The railroad bond decision was handed down in New York by Federal Judge John C. Knox. He ordered the St. Louis and Southwestern Railway to pay the gold equivalent of its bond coupons held by the Anglo-Continentale Treuhand.

Sent to Senate Intact.

The railroad was ordered to pay off a judgment of $16,383 obtained by the European concern as follows: $39.63 with respect to every $25 coupon due January 1, 1934; $42.23 with respect to each $25 coupon due July 1, 1934, and $42.26 with respect to each $25 coupon due January 1, 1935.

The Administration's gold bill, withdrawing the Government's consent to be sued for recovery on its own obligations, was sent to the Senate after House passage, without a single floor amendment.

An attempt by Representative John B. Hollister (Republican), Ohio, to limit the action to gold clause bonds was defeated, 96 to 59, on a standing vote and even more decisively on a motion to recommit.

Leading up to the Administration's preparation of the bill, and a presidential message requesting it on June 27, was the Supreme Court's ruling that the Federal Government had overstepped its authority in abrogating the gold clause in its bonds. But the court further ruled that bondholders were without redress, inasmuch as they had not proved a real loss.

Gold content of the dollar has been reduced until it is worth but 59.06 cents, and the price of gold has been correspondingly increased to the point that holders of gold-clause Federal securities contend they are worth $1.69 to the dollar. The gold bill was framed to prevent such recovery in the courts. Two cases already pending against the Government would be automatically thrown out by the measure.

Demanded Guilders.

While Judge Knox's railroad ruling was not tied to the testing of devaluation in the recent Supreme Court cases, and had no direct bearing on Federal gold-clause securities covered by yesterday's House action, it threw new and important light on the question of whether payments of American bonds held abroad shall be made in dollars or the gold equivalent of foreign countries.

Anglo-Continentale Treuhand sought payment of the coupons in guilders. Dutch currency is still on a gold basis. As the United States dollar was devalued, the Dutch guilder has correspondingly risen in value. Judge Knox ruled that the railroad, which had refused to pay in anything except American dollars, must pay in the gold equivalent of the guilder.

House debate on the Administration gold bill yesterday was on strictly party lines, with the Republican minority making a spirited, but futile fight to defeat it.

Representative Daniel A. Reed (Republican), New York, called it a "dishonorable legislative proposal that impaired the Nation's credit standing."

"It arises out of a series of political executive and legislative acts which were wicked in conception.

Quizzed on Spending

Whisky Bought Army Business, Witness Says

Silverman Admits Spending $500,00 to Get Trade; Payne Involved.

By the Associated Press.

A vivid tale of huge spending to promote business with the War Department and of attempts to sell Army equipment to Ethiopia unfolded yesterday before the House Military Committee.

From Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, the committee heard that Joseph Silverman, jr., who buys and sells surplus Army supplies, had spent almost $500,000 over several years to build up his business with the department.

And from Silverman himself the members received testimony of efforts to sell to Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia some of the uniforms and other supplies he had purchased from the Army, including tents and signal flags.

Silverman said he was not interested in stirring up war between Italy and Ethiopia, but that he had no objection to taking some of the emperor's "dough."

He conceded also, that companies controlled by himself and his brothers had dickered with Bolivia and Guatemala. Then he remarked that "you can't kill a man with a wool coat."

The committee learned from McSwain too, of modification of a contract between Silverman and the War Department effected in the lobby of a Washington hotel by Frederick H. Payne, former Assistant Secretary of War, the night before the Roosevelt Administration came into office.

Asserting that a power lobby expenditure of $300,000 created a capital furore, McSwain remarked:

"And here we have you, a single firm, spending nearly $500,000 around Washington."

He said that sum included $85,000 for lawyers' fees, $48,000 for travel and $311,000 for personal expenses, and that some of the money went for gambling and flowers and whisky for Army officers.

"Do I have to get your permission to do that?" Silverman asked.

Silverman, sitting in his shirt sleeves and champing on a cigar, said he had household expenses of

Ritchie Raps Roosevelt Policy, Declares New Deal a Failure

Former Governor Criticizes Spending, Defends Supreme Court as Bar to Dictatorship in Address to Hibernians.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, July 18.—Declaring that "the New Deal has not worked and we are on the rocks," Albert C. Ritchie, former Governor of Maryland, in an address severely criticizing the Administration tonight before the national convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians here, came close to breaking with President Roosevelt.

Not only did Ritchie flay the underlying philosophy of the New Deal as well as its fiscal policies, but he called for a return to observance of the Constitution without change and he spiritedly defended the Supreme Court as a barrier to a dictatorship in this country and the establishment of "a costly, bureaucratic, high-powered centralized government, which always grows by what it feeds on."

The former Governor specifically criticized the Roosevelt relief policies, declaring that no nation has ever been able to spend its way to recovery. He urged that steps be taken at once toward a balanced budget, else the end will be inflation and bankruptcy. Balancing the budget should be brought about, he asserted, through higher taxes for all and a retrenchment in expenses. He urged an end to currency experimentation.

Taking a fling at the President's share-the-wealth tax program, Ritchie declared that it should be recognized that wealth, as such "is not an evil," that it may be acquired by honest endeavor and skill, and may be used as an instrument for vast good and thus "it should not be ruthlessly torn to pieces or confiscated, or divided up with those who have not the ability or the genius to produce it."

Unusual significance attaches to this speech because it serves to indicate in some degree what is happening within the Democratic Party and portends things that may develop as the country approaches closer to the presidential election of next year and the expected tussle over increasing the authority of the Federal Government's constitutional amendment.

This significance becomes evident when the speech is viewed in light of the fact that Ritchie remains, at least, the nominee or titular leader of Maryland Democracy. Barring unforeseen developments, he will have much to say in Maryland's political affairs next year.

Although Ritchie has never been enthusiastic about the New Deal, he has supported President Roosevelt from the day of his nomination at Chicago until the present. Even tonight he did not mention the

Dime Store Bride Can't Cook And U. S. Adds to Lin's Worry

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, July 18.—Troubles piled up today on K. M. James Lin, son of China's President, and his bride, former clerk in a Columbus dime store.

From Cincinnati and Washington came word that immigration officials are investigating his case. From Lin's own mouth came, "I am very unhappy because neither one of us can cook."

Lin also was confronted by unconfirmed reports, which he promptly denied, that he had previously been married and had children in China.

But despite his troubles, Lin smiled broadly at his bride, the former Viola Brown, as he remarked: "I can't cook. She can boil water but can't fry eggs. I'm afraid she will burn the coffee."

W. A. Carmichael, district immigration director in Cincinnati, said his department will investigate Lin's case if Columbus authorities request Federal action.

At Washington, Labor Department immigration officials said Lin is in the United States on a student visa. They said his complete records, however, have not been forwarded from the port of his entry. Uncertain at what port he landed, officials asked all principal ports of entry to make a check.

Citizenship of Mrs. Lin would not be affected by her marriage, immigration officials said.

Lin and Miss Brown were married at Ashland, Ky.

On the whole, though, he was quite unperturbed by all his troubles.

His wife, whom he first met when she returned a billfold he had lost at her counter in a dime store, expressed faith in him.

Her father, Louis Brown, said: "He is a lot better than two-thirds of the American boys I've seen."

Mountaineer Kills 2 Deputies, Eludes Bloodhounds on Mule

By the Associated Press.

Middlesboro, Ky., July 18.—Two sheriff's deputies were slain today by rifle fire as they led an alleged embezzler from a hill cabin in the Virginia-Kentucky border country.

"We think he's headed for Kentucky, probably Harlan County," Sheriff R. F. Giles, of Lee County, Va., said of the fugitive, Green Allen Brooks.

Two of Sheriff Giles' men, Arch Redmond, 45, and Robert Bailey, 58, went down before rifle fire from behind them as they led Luther Poore away from Brooks' home. They acted on a fugitive warrant from Middlesboro, where Poore was accused of embezzlement. Their bodies lay in the dust an hour until officers got there. Poore did not flee. Brooks, carrying his rifle, slipped out the back door of the place and entered the mountains that ringed it, only 300 yards away.

Poore was jailed at Jonesville, Va., seat of Lee County, on the Kentucky charges. The deputies' bodies were brought to Middlesboro.

Hubert Williams, a neighbor, testified he heard two rifle shots and saw Brooks standing on his front porch. He said he then saw Brooks draw a bead on Bailey, shoot again, and Bailey slumped to the dirt.

Poore testified his father-in-law shot the officers.

Meanwhile, the posse's bloodhounds bayed on [illegible]ooks. His trail led across broken ground, through winding gullies and rough paths to a cabin far up in the hills. Here, Sheriff Giles said, the fugitive got a mule and his trail faded out.

Only 14 Failed, Banks May Set Record in 1935

Mere $2,700,000 Involved 57 in '34 Was Lowest in 14 Years.

By the Associated Press.

Bank suspensions have ebbed this year to a mere trickle, leaving Government agencies free to concentrate on clearing away the remaining depression wreckage in the banking field.

A survey yesterday disclosed only 14 banks on the 1935 casualty list, with deposits approximating $2,700,000.

No comparable figures for similar periods of previous years were available, but Government statisticians said bank closings probably had dropped to at least the lowest level since the war. In 1934, 57 licensed banks with deposits of nearly $37,000,000 were suspended, the smallest total in 14 years.

Only 68 Still Suspended.

Of the 4,500 banks with deposits of approximately $4,200,000,000, which were not licensed to resume business after the banking holiday in March, 1933, only 68 at the end of May had not been licensed or turned over to liquidators. Latest figures of the Federal Reserve Board further showed that no national banks were included among those remaining unlicensed.

Of the 1,417 unlicensed national banks at close of the banking holiday, the figures showed 290, with deposits of approximately $152,000,000, have been placed in liquidation.

Meanwhile, the thawing of frozen deposits has gone on, aided by operations of Federal credit relief agencies—Home Owners Loan Corporation, Reconstruction Finance Corporation and farm credit organizations.

A report of the Comptroller of the Currency for July 1 showed about $800,000,000 unpaid deposits in 1,490 national banks still in receivership out of total deposits of $1,858,623,094 at the time they were suspended. All except about 20 per cent of these banks were described as depression casualties, dating from 1929.

Comparable figures for State banks have not been compiled here. But a recent survey by Federal authorities showed more than $1,500,000,000 in deposits remained unpaid at the end of 1934 in 4,801 closed State banks. A comparison with deposits they held at time of suspension indicated about $1,300,000,000 had been paid out to depositors.

Most banks in receivership were said by officials to have fallen by the roadside before the bank holiday. The suspension roll for nine years and two months preceding the holiday totaled 9,685 banks with deposits of $4,867,344,000.

List Halved Since War.

Postwar suspensions have cut the number of banks in the United States about in half, leaving around $13,500 in operation. But their deposits were reported substantially larger than in 1921.

Improvements in real estate and security markets has encouraged hope of faster liquidation of remaining assets in national banks in receivership. They were described as comparatively "slow" for highly liquid assets were drawn on first to pay off creditors.

National bank receiverships closed out since last October have increased to 85. From January 1, 1929, to June 30 of this year, 224 receiverships were closed under the comptroller of the currency's office, with 85 restored to solvency. From the remaining 149, $38,712,942 was paid to depositors out of $51,915,963 in deposits at time of closing.

Eleven of the 14 banks suspended this year were members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

By Raymond Clapper

SENTIMENT for urging delay and careful consideration of the tax bill has been represented as due to millionaires who wish to postpone the evil day as long as possible.

But already some of the fruit of even brief deliberation is beginning to appear. Had the President's original program gone through, Congress would have slapped on the graduated corporation tax. It was suggested as a tax graduated upward on large corporation incomes based on the ability to pay. But it actually was a tax on bigness. Small stockholders in a large corporation would pay possibly a 17 per cent tax, whereas partners in a small enterprise, earning perhaps a high percentage of profit would pay a 10 per cent tax. It put a 70 per cent penalty on the size of the large corporation and took no account of the percentage of profit. It was a size tax, not an excess profits tax.

Now, however, the House Ways and Means Committee, after being allowed time to examine the proposition, is beginning to discover this elementary fact and is leaning strongly toward substituting an excess profits tax. The corporation that earns 15 or 20 per cent on its operations would pay a higher rate than the one which earns 6 or 8 per cent. That will strike most persons as fair.

There is complaint that the excess profits tax is easily avoided, that corporations will spend more heavily on plant extensions and in enlarging their sales forces and so on to escape the heavy penalties on excessive profits. Right now that would be a blessing instead of an evil. The Federal Government has spent billions trying to prime the pump. Possibly an excess profits tax would result in spontaneous priming by industry itself.

And the thing about that sort of pump priming is that the Government does not have to increase the deficit to obtain it.

Chairman Ashurst of the Senate Judiciary Committee has exploded the suggestion that the Supreme Court could be packed to favor the New Deal.

He has rounded up the history of judges to show how they didn't always follow the Presidents who appointed them. Jefferson's judges joined with John Marshall for a nationalistic interpretation of the Constitution. Marshall was almost beaten for confirmation by Federalists who thought he was too Jeffersonian. Jackson's judges sided with Marshall and cracked down on Jackson's own Postmaster General. Lincoln's own appointees overthrew his legal tender policy, and his close personal friend and appointee, Judge David Davis, delivered the smashing opinion against Lincoln's suspension of the writ of habeas corpus and the substitution of martial law.

They don't stay put on the Supreme Court.

Administration Democrats are recommending rereading of Chief Justice Taft's decision in the stockyards case in which he upheld the right of the Federal Government to regulate Chicago commission merchants on the ground that their dealings at Union Stockyards were a cog in the interstate commerce machinery.

This case would have caused trouble in the NRA decision except that the Schechters didn't have any retailer customers who sold outside of New York State. That probably would have made them a cog in the chain of interstate business like the Chicago commission men.

* * *

James M. Beck, then solicitor general, defended the Federal Government's power to regulate those commission men. He advised the court not to look through the small end of the telescope. Now he'd just as soon skip that. . . . The Nation's Business in its August number will print an article by Nathan B. Williams showing how, under the recent declaratory judgments act, a constitutional case can be tested before the Supreme Court inside of six months, which would avoid confusing delays. Incidentally, the Government, as well as private individuals, can use it if they really want to find out what's what promptly. . . . George Washington tried to get an advisory opinion from the Supreme Court but was turned down. The Constitution confines its power to "cases" and "controversies" arising. Most lawyers think an amendment would be necessary to permit advisory opinions. . . . One new Dealer paraphrases the Bible and asks whether the Constitution was made for man or man for the Constitution. . . . Secretary Wallace is on the West Coast talking up a constitutional amendment to broaden Federal powers.

Political parade: Senator J. Hamilton Lewis has changed his daily announcement about absentees. For days he arose every morning and solemnly informed the Senate that Senator Thomas, of Utah, who is conducting a course at the University of California summer school, was absent on "important public business." Now he says the Senator is "unavoidably detained" from the Senate. . . . Ray Moley, original No. 1 member of the late Brain Trust, is giving the opposition an unprecedented amount of space in his magazine. This week one article builds up Mrs. George Simmons, Missouri farm wife, who rocked the recent Republican grass roots conference with attacks on the "soft-handed fatheads" at Washington, and another scoffs at economic planning. For next week he announces an article on the futility of trying to change the Constitution to meet President Roosevelt's demand for broader Federal powers. . . . Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, is the happiest man in the country over the adverse AAA decision. Once a leader of the farm bloc, he started hammering AAA when the first gong sounded. Iowa farmers didn't like it. Even the mighty Des Moines Register and Tribune, run by his brother-in-law, Mr. Gardner Cowles, wouldn't go that far. The silver-haired Senator was left out on a limb. Rivals started after the nomination to take his Senate seat next year. But if AAA is knocked out he'll have a push-over next time. . . . Who do you suppose sat down with Mr. Roosevelt to work out legislation providing for the Government's sale of power from Bonneville Dam, the big PWA project near Portland, Oreg.? Why, Republican Senate Leader McNary. He expects to introduce the Administration bill. . . . Some Administration speakers are making it a point to tell their audiences in what fine health Mr. Roosevelt is. However, it isn't necessary any more. The press stopped the wild rumors with one exposure of them.

Crash Injures Airman, Ends Cape Town Hop

Cairo, Egypt, July 18 (AP).—The English flier H. L. Brooke, who is attempting a new flight record from England to Cape Town, crashed today at Mersa Matruh and was reported injured.

The reports received here did not make known the extent of his injuries nor the amount of damage done his plane. He took off from Lympe Airdrome shortly after midnight today in an effort to beat Mrs. Amy Mollison's record of four days and six hours for the flight.

Laws Must Fit Economic Fact, Wallace Holds

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Seattle, July 18.—Hope that the constitutional issue raised by recent court decisions would be debated throughout the land was expressed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace tonight in an address to the convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Wallace quoted Elihu Root to the effect that new conditions arising from the Nation's industrial development continuously demanded establishment of "new legal rights and obligations not contemplated when existing laws were passed or existing limitations upon the powers of government were prescribed in our Constitution."

Accepted Facts, He Adds.

In other words, Wallace added, "Mr. Root accepted the industrial revolution as fact, saw that it could not be repealed or waved away, and conceived it the duty of society to adjust legal rights and obligations, and the powers of government, to the fact, rather than attempt to fit the fact to existing statutes."

He said the framers of the Constitution itself had been authorized only to revise thea rticles of confederation but that the emergency was so great and the need of union so acute "that they exceeded their authority and wrote a new Constitution."

Jefferson's Louisiana purchase, Lincoln's declaration that the Dred Scott decision must be reversed, and Theodore Roosevelt's protest against using the Constitution to thwart efforts of the people to provide for their wn social and industrial well-being were cited by Wallace.

Must Find Unity, He Asserts.

"Now that the Nation is approaching maturity, we face the necessity of discovering that principle of unity which provides most fully and justly the basis for an enduring relationship of the several regions and groups to the Federal Union," Wallace said. "It must be a unity which will allow abundant room for diversity within it, and which will and decentralization—centralization permit simultaneous centralization of certain powers to permit national approach to national problems, decentralization of certain administrative functions to permit a rebirth of democracy in every township in the land.

"No one knows with any certainty just which, if any, amendment to the Constitution may be necessary in order to put such a prniciple of proper union into actino. We do know that it has not been politically feasible to use the Federal unity of the United States since the World War in any manner that would permit a fundtamentally sound approach to our long-run economic and political problems. Gradually the issue is being drawn. I hope it will be debated at length in every convention, in every schoolhouse of the land."

Davis, both of Solomon; George M. Boyd, Barstow; Mrs. C. L. Smither, Prince Frederick; Owen S. Jones, Dunkirk, and Robert S. Mead, of North Beach.

The problem of finding funds for old-age pensions will be one of the main tasks confronting the new board, temporary chairman of which will be T. Stanley Sunderland, president of the board of county commissioners.

No money has yet been appropriated, but the commissioners feel confident they will have no trouble raising it.

But Marble Will Be Used in Statue to First Train.

Washington is to have something new in statues.

It will be a marble likeness of "The Iron Horse," the first train which ever entered the city.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday introduced a bill to authorize the Capitol architect and others to select a site for construction of the memorial, somewhere on the Capitol Grounds, probably near Union Station.

The statute will be erected by employes of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in time for dedication, August 25, in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the day when the iron horse first puffed into town.

Panama Laws Prevent Shipment of Pilot's Body

By the Associated Press.

The War Department yesterday said there was nothing it could do for the family of Lieut. Winton S. Graham, of Big Stone Gap, Va., who requested the return of Graham's body from Panama where he was killed in a plane crash.

Expressing sympathy, department officials in a letter to Representative Flannagan (Democrat), Virginia, said laws in Panama prevent shipment of the body to the United States without cremation, and the department could do nothing. The family opposed cremation.

Central Bank Bill Is Offered By Senator Nye

Fletcher Will Urge Four Amendments, He Announces.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, yesterday offered his central bank plan as a rider to the Administration banking bill.

Senate consideration of this measure, worked out by the Glass subcommittee several weeks ago, has been delayed by debate on the AAA amendment bill, but Democratic leaders hoped to reach it next week.

Chairman Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, of the Banking Committee, however, said he would make a fight for four amendments, all of which are indorsed generally by the Administration, but which he said he was introducing without request.

One of the amendments would give the proposed new Reserve Board of seven exclusive authority to control the flow of credit through policies covering the buying and selling of Government bonds by the Reserve banks. As the bill is now drawn these seven members and five representatives of the 12 Reserve banks would constitute the "open market" committee having such control.

Another amendment would eliminate the provision to permit banks of deposits to return to the business of underwriting and selling securities under strict limitations. President Roosevelt has expressed flat opposition to this clause and all sides agree it will be eliminated.

A third amendment Fletcher has introduced would strike out the provision permitting directors of reserve banks to serve in a similar capacity in one other bank.

Fletcher also wants to eliminate a clause requiring that two members of the Reserve Board must be men of tested banking experience.

Nye's amendment, defeated in committee, would have a Government-owned central bank take over the Federal Reserve system and direct the Nation's finances through a board of directors of 48 chosen by popular vote from every State. It has the supprt of Father Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit.

AAA Bill Faces New Provision For Tax Suits

Borah Leading Bi-partisan Move to Permit Some to Reclaim Levies.

The Administration's AAA bill, already riddled with limiting amendments, last night faced a bi-partisan compromise drive in the Senate that threatened to strike from the measure its ban on court suits to recover processing taxes.

In its place, the coalition forces, led by Senator William E. Borah, Idaho Independent Republican, drafted a compromise that will permit processing tax suits wherever it is proved that the tax has been passed on to the consumer.

A strong movement was underway for adoption of the substitute before the Senate recessed last night. This was blocked, however, by an Administration stalwart—Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama—who forced the vote over until today.

Move Alarms Leader.

Speaking off the floor, to reporters, Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson said the Borah compromise was a "dangerous" amendment.

"All anyone would have to do to bring suit would be to swear he paid taxes, and these were not passed on to the consumer. If he swears he didn't pass it on, how are you going to prove that he did."

Earlier yesterday, Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, withdrew an amendment to protect rayon makers by a compensatory tax also on silk. Following this action, the Senate rejected a committee amendment levying a compensatory tax on rayon and other competitors of cotton, approximating 125 per cent of the cotton processing tax. The amendment was dropped with the consent of Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Agriculture Committee.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, vainly sought to return to the bill the House export debenture provison, setting aside 30 per cent of all customs duties to promote farm products here and abroad. On a roll call, the Connally amendment was defeated, 41 to 34.

While the Senate was struggling to work out an agreement on the processing tax suit ban, Attorney General Homer Cummings disclosed that the Government will attempt collection of taxes as usual except at the Hoosac mills, which won a ruling that the taxes were unconstitutional from a Boston Federal circuit judge.

Tax Receipts Decline.

Government reports showed the taxes fell off 45 per cent this month, compared with the same period last year. Collections for the first 16 days of July totaled $19,355,755, compared with $35,736,907 during last year's comparative period.

The first clew to a possible Senate compromise on the AAA proposal to bar processing tax suits, came during Senator Borah's assault on the provision.

"I would be perfectly willing to support a provision that the taxpayer should be required to disclose that he has suffered injury by paying the tax, and that he has not passed it on," said the Idahoan. "I would put the burden of proof on him.

"But this is not what we are discussing here. We are discussing the broad proposition that where it is admitted that a tax is illegally laid the citizen should be denied the right to go into court and test the question of whether he can recover it."

Borah said it is not "fair" to the citizen to collect money in the form of a tax, and then "deny him the ordinary tribunal by which these matters are adjusted. He conceded there was an "old fiction" that the Government can not be sued without its consent.

Old Notion Denounced.

"It is the most egregrious fiction that was ever incorporated in any system," he said, "that is, that the king can do no wrong, because at the time when it was incorporated in the Anglo-Saxon system of jurisprudence, the king did not do anything else but wrong, and the reason why the tribunals were denied to the citizen was because of the king's continuous wrong doing."

Borah said, some of the large corporations have been able to pass the tax on to consumers. He said he had letters however from small independent companies "which were not in a position to pass the tax on."

"Under a system where the people have prescribed by their Constitution a limit beyond which the Government may not go, it does not seem to me fair or just to the citizen to disregard those limitations, and then say to him that he has no tribunal in which to test the legality of denial, and that is precisely what it is proposed to do at this time."

Minority Leader Robinson argued that Borah "admits the technical constitutionality of this amendment, but says, nevertheless, that it is objectionable."

Robinson Quotes Law.

"The fact is," Robinson said, "it is a well-established principle of law that no sovereign can be sued without his consent. The Senator from Idaho objects to this on moral and not on legal grounds. If the United States Government were subject to suit, I ask you how long this Government could exist? The question of the immunity of the sovereignty has been etsablished beyond all manner of doubt. There is, however, the exception that when the Government departs from its ordinary functions and engages in private business, it is and should be subject to suit."

At one point, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, interposed that he heard with some satisfaction floor admissions that the processing tax is being passed on. When the AAA act was first under consideration, he declared, the Secretary of Agriculture vehemently denied the taxes ever would be transferred to the consumer.

Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, assailed the proposed barrier on suits as "tyrannical and immoral."

Lobby Inquiry Hears Utility Aids

Harris & Ewing.

R. P. Herron, left, Warren, Pa., bond salesman, who testified yesterday he burned copies of telegrams on utility bill, and E. W. O'Brien, of Erie, Pa., an official of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., who admitted he had been directed to dispose of his records on campaign.

merely because they were through with the campaign and had no further use for the data.

"Don't you know that Beach told you a Federal investigation had started and the company didn't want any incriminating papers to be seized?" Black asked.

After much faltering and restating, O'Brien admitted that such was the substance of Beach's instructions.

T. B. Kingsbury, Washington manager of Western Union, submitted a more accurate count of telegrams received by members of the House and Senators during the Wheeler-Rayburn bill consideration as Senator Daniel Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, attacked a new lobbying crusade against the President's tax bill as "stupid."

Kingsbury reported that 97,265 telegrams to Representatives were received in Washington during the House consideration of the utility bill. These cost the senders $58,359. An additional 30,000, costing $18,000, went to Senators.

Previously, messages filtered in at the rate of 50 to 100 a day over a period of several weeks, Kingsbury said.

Reports on Telegrams.

Frank R. Veale, Eastern division superintendent of Western Union, gave a detailed report on telegrams sent from Easton and Knox, Pa. From the former 5,276 messages went out to Senators Davis and Guffey, of Pennsylvania, and to Senators Barbour (Republican) and Moore (Democrat), of New Jersey, and Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and to a half dozen Pennsylvania Representatives.

Senator Hastings took the floor during the afternoon to denounce an unnamed corporation for its methods of lobbying against the President's tax program, which the Delaware Senator has previously attacked.

"Mr. President, I hold in my hand," he said, "exactly 100 typed letters, received yesterday and today, dated July 16, containing exactly the same language and signed by individuals living in New York City, New Jersey and the City of Baltimore.

"They were all addressed to me as a member of the Finance Committee, and the envelopes were exactly alike and clearly written on the same typewriter.

"Such letters, of course, have no effect upon me, except to annoy me; but I have no doubt that if I were prejudiced against the large corporations these letters would have the effect of increasing my prejudice.

"It is difficult for me to understand how the executives of any large corporations should be so stupid or believe the members of the Senate to be so stupid as to not see clearly how such letters originate. If the executives of large corporations see fit to notify their stockholders the effect of proposed legislation upon them, I think no person can complain.

"I shall not complain if the suggestion is made to the stockholder that if he or she be sufficiently interested that they write their representatives in Congress. It is not difficult for any of us to tell whether a letter is genuine or whether it is inspired propaganda. The genuine letter most of us are glad to get. The inspired letter is apt to create resentment."

Herron yesterday gave the committee a novel reason why he paid for all telegrams sent to members of Congress in cash in accordance with instructions from his superiors.

"I didn't see any use in broadcasting our activities on the thing," he said.

The bond salesmen, who had been accused by J. A. Fisher, suspended Western Union manager at Warren, of using the city directory to get signatures for telegrams sent to Representative Driscoll (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, insisted that all the signatures he used were authorized, although many others were obtained by Fisher.

Admits Using Directory.

He admitted using the directory to get names which he suggseted for Fisher to follow up and he also dictated many messages of which carbon copies were made.

"I knew who would be in favor of the bill and who would be against it," he explained.

"Well, how did it happen your acquaintances was limited to the first letters of the alphabet?" Senator Schwellenbach (Democra), of Washington, inquired.

Herron appeared nervous and ill at ease throughout his testimony, frequently mopping his brow with a handkerchief, and stopping the inquiry to ask if he might smoke.

He was cross-examined severely regarding his reason for not appearing at the hearing Wednesday in response to the committee's summons and in connection with his stop-over in Philadelphia to consult William Hill, an attorney of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. Hill came on with him to Washington, but was not the hearing.

Herron could throw no light on the mysterious burning of the Warren telegrams and denied having more than a speaking acquaintance with A. F. Christenson, the simplex operator, whom Fisher suspects of the deed.

Fire Suggestion a Joke.

Recalling his reported conversation with Fisher when he suggested throwing a barrel of kerosene in the telegraph office basement, Herron said:

"I was just joking, of course. Just like you might say you were going to burn your house to keep from paying taxes."

He said that, upon advice of L. A. Shew, Erie manager of Western Union, he urged Fisher "to come clean" in a report to his company. Fisher denied having anything to do with burning the files, however, he said.

O'Brien told the committee he had spent $4,800 on telegrams in Erie and that he had paid for them out of his personal account and with cash. He was reimbursed by "the company," but he couldn't remember whether the check was signed by the Associated Gas & Electric Co. or its subsidiary.

Vote to Adjourn Mounts as Post Polls Congress

124 Ballots to 58 Show Bent of Members as Many Hide Names.

The Nation's session-weary and perspiring Congressmen continued to express a preference for spending the rest of the summer at home through the Wahington Post's poll of adjournment sentiment in both Houses yesterday.

The Post, in an effort to determine if a roll call vote on adjournment taken under the aegis of House leaders this week represented the private views of Congressmen on going home, decided to poll members of the House and Senate on the following question:

"I believe that in the interest of recovery, the Congress should adjourn promptly after completing legislation now in conference and should defer tax legislation until later in the year."

Results of the poll as tabulated last night:

	Voting	Yes	No	Non-committal
Senate ...	34	19	15	..
House ...	136	95	41	3
Unidentified	12	10	2	..
Totals .	182	124	58	3

At least 90 per cent of House members responding to the poll indicated adjournment preference without a "record vote," returning ballot cards without signature. Only two members of the House returning poll cards yesterday signed their names. These were Representatives Charles R. Eckert, of Pennsylvania, and Nat Patton, of Texas. Both are Democrats. Both voted "no."

A third member of the House apparently changed his mind about identifying his ballot by name. That portion of his card bearing his name had been torn out.

Cattle Raisers Protest Shoe Plans of CCC

Composition Soles Draw Fire From Leather Producers.

By the Associated Press.

Farm, cattle and leather interests joined yesterday in protest of a proposal that the Civilian Conservation Corps buy 375,000 pairs of shoes with rubber composition instead of leather soles.

They put before Robert Fechner, director of the corps, the argument that the Government owns 2,000,000 hides that it does not know what to do with.

"Ninety thousand of them might be put into these shoes," said A. M. Loomis, of the National Dairy Union. "It seems a short-sighted governmental policy."

M. A. Watson, vice president of the Tanners Council, called on Fechner on Wednesday to protest the proposed purchase. Loomis said he expected the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange and the American National Live Stock Association to join in opposing it.

Conservation Corps officials said the word had not yet been given for the War Department to call for bids on the shoes, but that the proposal was under serious consideration.

"It is purely a matter of safety," one official said. "During a seven-month check of accidents, we found that 26 per cent of those in which men were injured were due to slips and falls. Our safety engineers have recommended the change."

A sample order of 2,000 pairs of shoes with composition soles was bought by the corps several months ago for a test. Officials said that while there had been no formal report covering the entire order, Fechner had visited the corps areas in which they were in use and had talked with foresters, officers and men about them and that their reports were favorable.

The farm and leather interests have argued that such shoes were hard on the feet, were more slippery when wet, were 25 per cent heavier than leather, and would cause more accidents.

Cecil Lean, Stage Star, Dies on Street in N.Y.

New York, July 18 (AP).—Cecil Lean, 57, veteran musical comedy actor, fell dead today in front of the Plymouth Theater. It was believed death was caused by a heart attack. Lean was walking with his wife, an actress known professionally as Cleo Mayfield, when he was stricken.

For many years Lean was associated with the late Florenz Ziegfeld. Some of the Broadway productions in which Lean had leading parts were "No, No, Nanette," "Of Thee I Sing," and "Everybody's Welcome." He was a member of the Lambs. Burial will be at Lake Sunapee, N. H.

Premier of Australia Lauds Crew in Crash

Victoria, British Columbia, July 18 (AP).—Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons of Australia today praised the behavior of the crew of the Canadian-Australian liner Niagara, in collision last night with the freighter King Egbert in the Strait of Juan de Fuca. No one was injured, but both ships limped back here damaged.

The prime minister, one of the 150 passengers on the Niagara, said he planned to continue southward immediately to catch the American liner President Madison for his return home.

Repairs on the Niagara will take eight or ten days.

"The crew were at their stations and lifeboats were swung out as passengers were ordered on deck," Lyons said, "but the excitement was only for a moment or so. After half an hour the dance and picture show continued as if we were still on our way."

Girl, 17, on Probation— In Killing of 'Peeper'

Los Angeles, July 18 (AP).—Kathelyn Parks, 17, dancer, who shot and killed Glenn Drewyor, 15, from the bathroom window of her home in the belief that he was a "peeper," was made a ward of the Juvenile Court today and paroled to custody of her mother, Mrs. Lou Parks, of Huntington Park. She was ordered to return to court August 1 to receive terms of her probation which will be effective until she is 21.

"Fear does not warrant the shooting of a human being," said Superior Judge Samuel Blake, "but there are certain extenuating circumstances in this case. • • • This girl was very nervous, and the court finds she probably believed herself in peril."

House Reveals $500,000 Drive On Army Trade

$25,000 to $30,000 a year and that he "blew" $25,000 last year for his daughter's wedding. He had estimated earlier that his salary was about $12,000 annually. He said he maintained residences here and in Bradley Beach, N. J.

His testimony was so colorful and spiced with profanity that McSwain admonished him once to "please use chaste language."

Blames Gen. Dewitt.

Yesterday's hearing started up again a special inquiry which the House ordered the Military Committee to make into War Department business dealings.

Silverman refused to attach any special significance to obtaining the contract modification on the last night of the Hoover Administration. The change removed from the contract for a year a clause forbidding him to sell Army materials in the United States.

The witness said Brig. Gen. John L. Dewitt, former Army Quartermaster General, whom he termed a "Jewbaiter" who hid "dishonesty" behind his "official cloak," had "maliciously and viciously" held up the change and that he could make it "crash" through only on March 3, 1933.

New York Policeman Summoned.

He said "good whisky" made him a bit hazy about the events of March 3.

"Not too hazy to get the modification before Assistant Secretary of War Payne went out," McSwain observed.

"That's a dirty insinuation," Silverman snapped.

After questioning Silverman about a $250 check he had given Dennis Mahoney, New York policeman, McSwain late in the afternoon ordered that the officer be summoned to appear before the committee today.

Silverman said he had known Mahoney for years and that the policeman frequently helped him cash checks. He denied, in response to a question, that he had ever helped Mahoney pay a bill at the Croydon Hotel, where the officer lives in New York.

Plans for Relief In '36 Presage Fear for Jobs

Survey Asked by President Indicates Need of More Funds.

studies respecting the financial requirements of the unemployment problem for one year hence at a White House conference attended by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Frack C. Walker director of the National Emergency Council and Hopkins.

It was explained that Morgenthau wished to obtain as soon as possible some idea of the money that would be needed to take care of the jobless in the next fiscal year, so that he might go to work on his budget estimates which must be submitted to Congress in January. Preliminary estimates will not be ready, however, until the fall, it was believed and these may be revised late in December. The regular departments and agencies of the Government are now being called on to prepare their budget estimates.

Decisions Deferred.

No decisions were made as to the approach to the relief problem next year or the extent of appropriations, it was asserted. Miss Perkins said that undoubtedly regular employment would show a substantial increase by July 1 next and that the financial burden on the Federal Government would be less than this year.

But there was nothing definite that any of the conference could say and their meeting inspired all sorts of speculation as to future unemployment relief requirements. For instance, it was recalled that sometime ago it was reported that key figures in the Administration believed the country was destined to have permanently 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 unemployed persons, able and willing to work.

If this belief materializes and this group becomes the ward of the Federal Government, then it is clear that appropriations to provide relief or work—preferably the latter from all Administration viewpoints—will run into the billions of dollars annually for some years to come.

Some who have studied the unemployment relief problem appear convinced that the situation a year hence will call for an appropriation as great as that made for the current fiscal year—if not more because of the exigencies due to a campaign year when destitute groups are better able to enforce their demands.

Belmont, Va., Reports First Case of Paralysis

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 18.—The first case of infantile paralysis in the town of Belmont was reported yesterday. At the same time, the death, due to the disease, of Mattie Bates, 30-year-old colored woman, of Cismont, was reported from the county.

The new case is Roger Haney, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James N. Haney, of Montrose avenue. He is being treated at home.

Dr. C. H. Eller, health officer, reiterated his warning that children should be kept from crowds and unnecessary contact with other people, and Sheriff J. Mason Smith announced that visitors would not be permitted to see prisoners in the jail on account of the risk of contagion.

Trial Justice System Pays Way in County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 18.—The trial justice system is paying its way, a study of the records of A. J. Tavenner, trial justice, showed today. During the first year the system has been in operation in Frederick County, Justice Tavenner has collected $4,283.75.

Of this amount, the State will receive $2,544.75 and the county $249.

Commenting on a statement made in Richmond recently, to the effect that "one of the objects of the audit is to determine to what degree each court pays for its own operation by collecting fees and fines," Justice Tavenner said he believed it unfair to demand of the lower court that it "pay its way." No such demands, he asserted, are made of higher courts or other State organizations.

Postlude

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

Second "Sunset Symphony," played at the Watergate by the National Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor. Program: Prelude to Acts 3 and 1, "Lohengrin" (Wagner); 'Siegmund's Love Song," from "Die Walkure," and "Walther's Prize Song," from "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner), sung by Bert Granoff, tenor; Prelude to Act 3, "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner); Overture to "Tannhauser" (Wagner); "Die Moldau" (Bedrich Smetana) "Songs My Mother Taught Me" and "Humoresque" (Dvorak), and "Capriccio Espagnol" (Rimski-Korsakov).

The peace-loving Wagner—the Wagner who took leave occasionally from his concern for a world of wrongs—came to the Potomac Watergate last evening, and spirited away enthralled listeners to the serene heavens of the "Evening Star."

This quiet, simple Wagner, so unlike the turbulent revolutionary who composed "The Ring," came as Dr. Kindler and the National Symphony Orchestra played their second "Sunset Symphony" before a throng that equalled, if it did not exceed in size, the assembly of 10,000 music lovers who packed the season's opening last Sunday evening.

This calm Wagner came as the glow of a summer evening faded over the Virginia hills, as a round moon floated up from the Mall, as a quiet Potomac gently rocked its attentive canoes.

Of this Wagner Dr. Kindler and his musicians spoke eloquently last evening. They spoke of a sublimity that is ethereal—that exists far away from the trials of a disturbed world.

Such was the force of a program, that on the announcement sheet looked common enough—it was made up entirely of familiar works. But there was nothing ordinary, or worn out, in the music that wafted from the orchestra's floating shell last evening.

Into this program, which devoted its most important half to the compositions of the German master, the voice of Bert Granoff, Washington's popular tenor, fitted perfectly. It possessed the absolute lyricism that made his two selections an element in the serenity of Dr. Kindler's program. He sang a warm "Siegmund's Love Song," and his "Walther's Prize Song" was noble in its simple dignity.

True, Dr. Kindler led off his program with the tempestuous Prelude to the Third Act of Lohengrin, but it was but a brief overture to the silken Prelude to the First Act, in which the orchestra cast the spell of spirituality that bound the audience for the rest of the program. Even the sensuous Venusberg music of the "Tannhauser" Overture failed to break this spell, and the Pilgrim's Chorus, for once dominated the performance of that dramatic prologue. The Prelude to the Third Act of "Die Meistersinger" could not have been played in a more appropriate group.

In the last part of the program Dr. Kindler turned to a Slavic group, and a tour de force, Rimski-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnol." Smetana's "Die Moldau" and the Dvorak numbers, being without spectacular elements, were not off-color after the Wagner. But the Spanish Caprice, intended as a piece for instrumental display, was sorely conspicuous, and strangely enough, the instrumentalists, while effecting fire, did not show the musicianship that produced, for example, the fine "Lohengrin" First Act Prelude.

Dr. Kindler responded to the ovation tendered him and the Orchestra with an encore, from the Waltzes of Johann Strauss.

Adjustments made since Sunday in the sound amplification system, and in the seating arrangement, have made the Watergate sight ideal for concert purposes, and the "Sunset" concerts for the five weeks to come should hold hours of complete enjoyment for Washington's music lovers. J. W.

A MARK TO TRUST FOR QUALITY

90 PROOF

OF course, to the Colonel, wise in the ways of the East, that stirrup-cup of Gilbey's was as natural as the sun's rising. And as necessary as looking over his express rifle before they lumbered off for a shot at Stripes. For Gilbey's Gin, since 1867, has been part and parcel of the British people's life. And for that matter, of the world's life.

For rarely, if ever, has there been a great liquor with such international prestige. Europe's fashionables in Monte Carlo will praise Gilbey's rare delicacy in a cocktail. The swanky "Leftnant" of the Bengal Lancers will cheer it in a tall, tinkling drink on a hot Indian afternoon. A lean, tanned big-game hunter in Uganda might mention its mellow vigor. But on one fact they all agree . . . that Gilbey's is one of the world's great gins.

And now, prepare yourself for the shock of your life. Look at the amazingly low price that Gilbey's costs you here in America! Imagine a price like that for a gin that has won the world's praises for three generations!

The reason is very simple. Gilbey's is now made in America . . . under the control of America's greatest distilling organization from grain to bottle. That means no tariff duties. And many savings in distilling costs. One taste of Gilbey's straight will show you why it makes all gin drinks better!

Highway Board Cites Economy In Cecil Action

Intention to Eliminate Job of County Supervisor Is Declared.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., July 18.—Giving "economy" as its reason for changes in the Cecil County roads setup, the State roads commission today filed its answer to an amended complaint of the Cecil County commissioners in the court action resulting from dismissal of the county roads supervisor by the roads commission.

The county commissioners are contesting right of the State commission to dismiss Joseph H. Richards, the man recommended by the county body to be county roads supervisor, a post he held for two years.

The State commission was given five days by the Cecil County circuit court to file its answer to the amended complaint. Judges J. Owen Knott and Thomas J. Keating, in the order allowing the State to file the answer, gave the opinion that the change in road supervisors was made "solely and entirely for political reasons."

May Eliminate Job.

The court opinion also criticized the State commission for having "abused the discretion reposed" in it by the appointment of a Republican to succeed a Democrat.

The answer filed today by the State commission differs in only one major respect from its demurrer to the original action. The major change was stated in the answer as:

"The respondent showed that further consideration of the maintenance of the roads in Cecil County—State and county—discloses the fact that the two systems of roads are parallel and present comparable problems of maintenance and the commission, in its effort to reduce the cost of maintaining the roads—State and county—under its jurisdiction and for which it responsible, is now considering the advisability of placing the supervision of all the roads of Cecil County, whether a part of the State system or a part of the county roads system, under the supervision and management of a competent, trained and able engineer, whose duty it will be to supervise both the county and State roads and that, when this action is taken, there will be no need for the office of supervisor of county roads." * * *"

Cameron Job Uncertain.

The State commission declared in its answer that if William M. Cameron, who was named to supervise all the roads in the county, is found to be incompetent or insufficiently trained, a new engineer will be named.

Cameron was named by the State commission on June 1 to take over supervision of the roads in Cecil County. The county commissioners already had recommended Richards.

The county began the action seeking retention of Richards, and the court upheld it last Saturday in overruling the State commission's demurrer.

No date has been set for the formal court hearing on the mattter.

Winchester Armory Declared Inadequate

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 18.—Inspection of the local armory by officials of the Third Corps Area has resulted in a rating of "inadequate," according to information received by Lieut. Lawrence C. Hollis, commanding officer of Headquarters Company, which shares the facilities with Company I, 116th Regiment of National Guard.

Plans are under consideration for construction of a new armory provided Federal aid is available. There have been rumors that the local National Guard units may be transferred to other cities unless facilities are provided.

Two Years on Road, Better Nears Goal

New York, July 18.—A three-wheeled pushcart started for the White House today in front of Emanuel Jonidas, Waterbury, Conn., who has pushed it to the West Coast and back in a reverse-English election bet.

Jonidas promised Republican voters of Litchfield, Conn., in 1932, where he lived at the time, that if Franklin D. Roosevelt were elected he would show his elation by pushing the cart to the White House, via Los Angeles, and presenting it to the President.

He started September 6, 1933, and has averaged about 25 miles a day. In Pittsburgh he was struck by an automobile and spent several days in a hospital.

4 Virginia Firms Join in Battle On AAA Taxes

Two U. S. Judges Grant Temporary Injunctions to Halt Payment.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 18.—Four more Virginia companies—three flour mills and a peanut company—have joined the vigorous attack launched in Virginia courts against processing levies imposed under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The action which the four firms took in the two Federal District Courts of Virginia brought to 14 the number of companies reported in the fight. There were reasons to believe that similar action will be taken by others before the end of the week.

Judge Luther B. Way, of the United States Eastern District Court of Virginia, granted a temporary injunction to restrain Collector of Internal Revenue N. B. Early from collecting the cent-a-pound tax on peanuts late yesterday. It was the seventh temporary injunction allowed by him.

Temporary restraining orders against collection of the wheat processing tax were allowed three more Shenandoah Valley flour mills by Judge John Paul, of the United States District Court of Western Virginia, yesterday. They were M. W. Menefee & Son, of Harrisonburg; the Wilkins Milling Co., of Edinburg, and the Dayton Roller Mills, of Dayton.

Three other mills had been granted previous restraining orders pending hearing of applications for temporary injunctions before Judge Paul on Monday. All contended the processing tax feature of the agricultural adjustment act is unconstitutional, basing their claims on the Schechter-NRA case.

The fourteenth company known to have protested the tax is the Roanoke City Mills, which owes $27,285.90, and which has posted $28,000 bond pending outcome of its suit.

'Roadless Bridge' at Danville Will Be Used for First Time

Span Built in 1924 Soon to Serve Traffic; Work on Approaches Begun.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., July 18.—The "roadless bridge" of Rockingham County, which for 11 years has stood over Dan River as a monument to county differences, is about to be used for the first time.

Workmen have started grading the approaches, which were never finished, and before many weeks it is expected to be serving the public.

The concrete structure was built by a Tennessee bridge company at a cost of $40,000 in 1924, after three members of the Rockingham County Board of Commissioners had let the contract.

Political repercussions followed and one of the three members resigned and was succeeded by an appointee who was opposed to the bridge. With a negative majority the bridge contract was canceled but the representatives of the Luten Bridge Co. held that this could not be done.

The work progressed and the bridge was finished. Ensuing litigation resulted in the North Carolina Supreme Court holding that it was not incumbent on the county to pay for the bridge as the builders took the loss.

For years the bridge remained unjoined to the road from Reidsville to Leaksville. Recently the county authorities authorized the blasting away of the rock on one side of the bridge so as to make possible the building of the approaches.

Poll Disapproves Route for By-Pass

Hagerstown Wants It to Follow Main Section.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 18.—The Mayor and City Council are prepared to oppose any by-pass of Route 40 through Hagerstown that will be diverted around the business section, as a result of a vote by several hundred citizens in the courthouse last night.

The vote was taken after three hours of speeches on the plan of the State Roads Commission to reroute the highway three blocks south of the business section.

Opponents of the proposed route were led by Robert H. McCauley, attorney, while proponents were headed by Robert Spigler, merchant. An open forum was held, in which several score persons joined after the meeting had been opened and its purpose explained by Mayor I. M. Wertz.

The Mayor and council also were instructed to use their influence to prevent the rerouting of Route 11, which now passes through the business section, by way of the Greencastle - Williamsport pike, which would carry North-South traffic four miles west of the city.

McCauley said that the by-pass would take traffic through the poorest residential sections, unsightly railroad yards and factory buildings and would give a poor impression of the city if the proposed route is adopted.

Winebrener, president of the Lions Club, and Mathias, was named to confer with other towns, including Rockville, Gaithersburg, Thurmont and Emmitsburg in the interest of the Frederick route.

Chicago Killer Meets Death From Ambush

Shotgun Slugs End Crime Career of Old-Time Beer Baron.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 18.—In a shotgun ambush flashback to the gang battles he fought with the O'Banions and Capones, Louie (Two Gun) Alterie was assassinated today.

Stepping out of his Northside apartment building the 46-year-old veteran of gang and labor wars walked into a hail of shotgun slugs and the death which he had dodged for nearly 15 years.

It poured from the open window of a room in an apartment house commanding the parking place, where Alterie's shining new sedan was parked.

Rushed to a hospital, he murmured weakly to his wife, Erma, "They got me, honey." He was unconscious when police arrived and died without making a statement.

In the "nest" where the killers had lurked nine days waiting for their chance at the gangster who had been an illicit beer baron, labor union overlord and a Colorado "dude" rancher, police found a repeating shotgun, an automatic rifle and several shells.

Police were confronted with a maze of possible motives as they set out to find the killers. A swashbuckling brawler from the start of the gang wars over illicit liquor, Alterie's long connection with rackets and his dominance of the Theater Janitors Union were studied particularly.

Suspected In Killings.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, of the State's attorney's police, said Alterie, whose real name was Leland Varain, was a suspect in the slaying of Tommy Maloy, Movie Operators' Union czar, a few months ago. Police said he was suspected also of the slaying of Paddy King several years ago in the Motion Picture Operators' Union headquarters.

"Alterie had been going a long, long way on borrowed time," said Gilbert. "There are a thousand reasons why he might have been knocked off."

Whether the killers were labor war enemies or not, they evidently remembered Alterie was the first Chicago ganster to don a steel vest. Twelve slugs pierced his body, in the region of the head and face.

Alterie got his sobriquet "Two Gun" by posing, armed with two pistols, after his early partner, Dion O'Banion, was slain in one of the earliest beer-war assassinations, and boasting: "I'll shoot it out at State and Madison street with the killers."

Dude Ranch Owner.

Proprietor for several years of the Diamond V ranch, near Denver, Alterie was banished from the State as an alternative to a five-year prison term after he shot two men in a hotel brawl.

Known also as "Diamond Louie," he was one of the gaudiest of the gangsters. An inveterate exhibitionist, he affected red satin shirts at $40 each, $200 sombreros, and flashed thousands of dollars worth of diamonds on his person.

But there was only about $25 in cash in his pockets, police said.

In Alterie's English studio apartment, police found Mrs. Mary Wittusen, 27, and her 7-month-old baby, from Denver, Colo. The young woman said she did not know her host was Alterie. She told officers a telephone call came just after Alterie and her sister had left to meet their car. She said she went to the window to call him and saw him sprawl to the sidewalk.

Mrs. Alterie, the former Erma Rossi, of Denver, was not injured by the shotgun blast. She was rushed to the town hall police station for questioning.

WATCH KIDNEYS SAME AS BOWELS

Wash Out Your 70,200 Feet of Kidney Tubes

Your bowels contain only 27 feet of intestines, yet the kidneys contain nearly 30 million tiny tubes or filters which would measure 70,200 feet if laid end to end. Therefore, it is just as important to watch the kidneys as the bowels. Kidneys are working all the time and are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and poisonous waste out of the blood.

Healthy persons pass thru the bladder 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter. If you pass less than this, your 70,200 feet of kidney tubes may be clogged with poisonous waste. This is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Kidneys should be watched closely and need cleaning out the same as bowels. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to wash out your 70,200 feet of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

A concrete bottom will be constructed for the Langdon Recreation Center wading pool near Twentieth and Franklin streets northeast. Because of an unsatisfactory sand bottom, the pool has not been in use this summer.

D. C. Justices Dispose 1,200 Cases in Term

Criminal Prosecutions Not Counted in Estimate of Official.

Over 1,200 cases were tried in the District Supreme Court during the term of court recently brought to an end by the summer recess, it was shown yesterday when Assignment Commissioner Fred O'Connell completed a survey of the nine months work.

That figure does not take into consideration the hundreds of criminal cases that were disposed of in the two criminal courts. The figures relate only to the seven justices sitting in the law and equity branches.

At the start of the fall term there were 853 equity cases on the calendar. Of these, 540 were tried and disposed of, while on the law side, a total of 672 cases was wiped off the books. As matters now stand, there are 313 equity cases awaiting trial, and 593 law suits pending. These latter figures take into account the cases filed during recent months and now "all set" so far as the preliminary legal moves are concerned.

In addition, there were more than 200 cases finally disposed of in the motions court, where litigants failed to run the gamut of technical problems. Such cases would, for example, include suits that were stricken on demurrer or were decided finally because of either an insufficient defensive plea or failure to make out a case that would warrant the intervention of a jury.

O'Connell estimates that litigants in both law and equity can reach trial now in much less than a year, whereas, before the installation three years ago of the present system, it frequently took yars to get a decision.

Man Jailed for Selling Marihuana to Minor

Roanoke, Va., July 18 (AP).—Albert St. Clair, 29, today was given the maximum punishment of 12 months in jail and a fine of $500 when found guilty by a hustings court jury of contributing to the delinquency of a minor by selling him marihuana cigarettes, containing an opiate.

Judge J. L. Almond, jr., in denying a motion of defense counsel that the verdict be set aside, declared that he regretted the law would not permit the jury to send the defendant to the penitentiary for the rest of his life. He gave instructions that St. Clair be sent to the State road force to serve out his sentence.

'Woman in Red' With Dillinger Lives Simple Life in Chicago

Unafraid of His Men, She Says, Because She 'Didn't Expose Him.'

Chicago, July 18.—The "Woman in Red," popularly supposed to have put John Dillinger on the spot for the Federal men a year ago July 22, was found in Chicago today, living a prosaic life.

She is Mrs. Anna Sage, comely red-haired Rumanian, and she told her story for the first time.

She denied that she "put the finger on Dillinger," and she revealed that she had not fled from Chicago after that action-packed night when the most hunted desperado in the world was shot down as he strolled out of the Biograph Theater here, with the "Woman in Red" on one arm and Polly Hamilton on the other.

Rumor had her fleeing to Rumania to escape gang vengeance of Dillinger's pals. As a matter of fact, she lives within a few blocks of the spot where Dillinger made his last stand on Chicago's Northwest side.

Friendship Broken Up.

She disclosed that she had broken her friendship with Polly, whom her he was "Jimmie Lawrence," a she had known for many years. She blamed Polly for many of the "lies" which she said were responsible for popularizing her as the woman who led Dillinger into the death trap.

Bitterly she denied that she knew the man who played cards in her night clubs was John Dillinger, To Board of Trade employe.

"Why, once," she said, "after a bank raid in South Bend in which Dillinger was said to have been involved and in which one man was killed and three wounded, he sat sipping coffee and reading newspaper accounts of the holdup.

"I said, 'that's a horrible thing. The man who did that should be captured and hung.'

"Jimmie sat kind of thoughful for a moment, and, without looking up from his paper, said, 'Yeah, I guess you're right. That's pretty lousy, isn't it?'"

Recalling her first meeting with "Jimmie," Mrs. Sage said Polly brought him to her Halsted street apartment about a month before he was killed, and several months after his sensational wooden gun" escape from the Crown Point (Ind.) Jail. Polly introduced him as Jimmie Lawrence.

Thought Highly of Him.

"I thought he was a very nice-looking young man," Mrs. Sage said. "There was nothing about him to mark him apart from thousands of other men. He was kind and considerate of others. I liked him and he and Polly used to take me to theaters all over the city. How could I know he was the most hunted criminal in the world?

"Police were everywhere we went and I never saw 'Jimmie' make any attempt to avoid them. I never saw him carry a gun."

Scoffing at reports that she had fled Chicago to save her life, Mrs. Sage asserted she had done nothing for which pals of Dillinger need seek vengenance. She obtained the name "Woman in Red" from her dress the night Dillinger was slain.

"If Dillinger's pals believed me responsible for his death they would have found me, no matter where I went. I have no reason to be afraid."

That fatal night when Dillinger walked into the death trap laid by Melvin Purvis and his Department of Justice agents "will never be erased from my mind," she said.

"Jimmie and Polly were at my home that day and decided to attend a movie. Jimmie couldn't seem to make up his mind where he wanted to go. Finally, he decided on the Biograph Theater, only a block away. We went there to see a gangster picture, 'Manhattan Melodrama.'

"I had no idea that Government men were waiting for us to come out of that theater. When we stepped onto the sidewalk it seemed as though the world had come to an end.

Her Memory Faulty.

"Jimmie, Polly and I were all together as we came out. Shot after shot was fired. Jimmie broke away from us and began to run. Then I don't know exactly what happened.

"Dimly I remember seeing Jimmie fall. Then I grabbed Polly by the hand and fled from the scene to my home. An hour later I learned the real identity of Jimmie when the newsboys appeared on the streets shouting: 'Dillinger slain.'

"Almost a week later the police raided my apartment and arrested me. They said I put Dillinger on the spot for the Government men and tried to make me admit that I did.

"The police were wrong. I did not put Dillinger on the spot. I couldn't have put him on the spot because I didn't know he was Dillinger.

"I know I can never forget that horrible night, but I hope that time will dim its memory."

Pox Ridden Youth Puts 8,000 to Flight

Breaks Quarantine to Swim, Imperils Bathers.

By the United Press.

Kenosha, Wis., July 18.—"It was too hot to stay indoors." Tony Steponitis, 18-year-old smallpox victim, gave that explanation tonight for breaking a five weeks' quarantine and going swimming among thousands of unsuspecting bathers yesterday and today.

Health officers captured him tonight after a two-block chase as he was attempting to slip into his home through a rear entrance.

He was taken to Isolation Hospital where he will remain at least another week. A warrant charging violation of State health laws was issued. Authorities said charges would be brought against his parents.

More than 8,000 persons were at the municipal beach today when health officers, seeking Steponitis, spread word that a smallpox victim was among them. They fled.

Physicians were besieged tonight with requests for vaccination. Dr. Gustav Windesheim, health commissioner, issued a warning for all at the beach in the past two days to be vaccinated immediately.

You've noticed it . . . people are becoming more critical of whiskey. Do your friends really enjoy the drinks you serve?

Of course they're polite. But what is their honest opinion?

Why take chances? It's so easy to be praised as a host . . . to have people look forward to your drinks. For there's one whiskey more people prefer than any other. Seagram's Crown! Because it is blended the Seagram way for better taste — it is America's favorite. You don't need to take our word for that. Prove it yourself with the famous Seagram "Guest Test," shown at the right. And if the verdict is Seagram's, remember—the difference in price is slight—the difference in taste is great.

1. Offer your friends their choice—Seagram's Crown and any other whiskey.

2. The whiskey that wins most often, is the whiskey to buy—always!

U. S. Sidesteps Debt Problem, Bar Declares

ing down of debt superstructure must lie at the foundation of any plan which offers hope of success."

The committee said that the recent Supreme Court decision in the NRA case, while turning back the tide of expansion of the commerce clause of the Constitution, "will accentuate legislation under the bankruptcy clause for the rearrangement of debtor-creditor relations."

Warns Against Inflation.

Declaring inflation of existing wealth to balance liability totals can be accomplished only by expansion of the currency, the committee stated "impending fear of resort to such an artificial and dangerous expedient has proved to be an obstacle in the way of recovery."

"Economists are agreed that a forced balance through inflationary measures or expanded currency is temporary and unsound. Debt scaling, on the contrary, is a scientific and permanent solution, although more difficult to accomplish."

The committee report, read by Jacob M. Lashly, of St. Louis, said there are three points of contact of the Government with the citizens which must be considered."

"First, there is the increasing concentration of wealth in a small number of corporations," the report stated. "It is estimated that approximately 200 corporations, excepting banks, managed by about 1,000 executives, owned one-half of the corporate wealth.

Sees Domination of Few.

"While these figures may be an overstatement, yet a small number of corporations exercise a dominant influence over price control and trade practices, and virtually control the production and distribution economy of the country.

"Thus, by loans to corporations, the Federal Government is able, to a certain extent, to exercise control over these corporations. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has loaned to corporations as much as $5,000,000,000 * * *"

"While this situation does not justify the prediction that ownership by the Government of the means of production or distribution generally will directly result from these operations, it must be admitted that its position as mortgage creditor already approximates partial control over some of the major industrial, public utility and transportation properties."

Boozer, of Boston road, Va.; Walter J. Gross, McLean, Va.; Allen Chandler, 742 Ninth street northeast, and Charles Matthew Dunn, 719 A street southeast.

Ritchie Raps Roosevelt Policy; Declares New Deal a Failure

Former Governor Decries Spending Policy of Administration.

President by name. When the NRA's Blue Eagle drive was on, Ritchie made a Nation-wide broadcast in its behalf, as a temporary emergency measure. Subsequently he applauded the President for his sincere effort to bring about recovery.

But tonight Ritchie for the first time publicly declared that the New Deal had failed, and that "what our body politic needs now is enlightenment and courage to recognize that further progress along mistaken lines always means danger or worse, and that we should jettison policies which have proved unsound and un-American." He added that "if you say that means 'going back,' I answer that it is the part of wisdom to go back if you embark on the wrong route."

Unless the New Deal in the next year undergoes a substantial revision, it is unlikely in the face of those words that Ritchie will be found on the stump urging the reelection of President Roosevelt. Yet he will not bolt his party for any reactionary Republican. It is a dilemma facing many conservative Democrats, but such an event, if it develops, is sufficient to make Maryland a doubtful State.

In view of what the former Maryland Governor said tonight, it is probable that should President Roosevelt press his fight for a constitutional amendment to permit what the Supreme Court has outlawed, Ritchie will be found actively opposing it.

This is political speculation, but based on the extent to which he went in tonight's speech, it is regarded as sound speculation by those who know the former Maryland Governor and his deep-seated convictions regarding State rights and the limited scope of the Federal Government.

At the outset of his address to the Hibernians here, Ritchie contended that the country again had reached "political cross roads—one way leading to a government of some other form and fashion than the one we know, the other leading to a reawakened and re-established American democracy."

He said he did not believe the American system of Government is obsolete or not adapted to the problems of the day.

"The New Deal has had its trial," he asserted. "It has been a fair trial. There was no lack of cooperation. As a whole, the country hoped it would succeed and tried to make it succeed. But as we watched its high hopes, and as we now observe the results, I think the conclusion is inescapable. The New Deal has not worked, and we are on the rocks."

Sees Some Good.

Some of the New Deal policies "have proved good and should be preserved," he asserted, but added that "when you view this collection of Federal policies as a whole—particularly those which change the basic structure of the American Government and threaten if they do not destroy the self-governing functions of the States and the free and independent spirit of the people—then I believe we see that the hope of these United States lies, as it always has, in the strength of a virile, unshaken and abiding faith in the Constitution, and in its adaptability to changing times and changing conditions."

He said he did not question the sincerity of those advocating the "New Deal." He conceded the sincerity of the "divers and sundry professors" who saw in the New Deal an opportunity for "trying out upon the American people nostrums and theories and isms of one kind or another which they have conceived."

"I question only the practicability and validity of many of their ideas as applied to the American people," he asserted.

Ritchie conceded that the aftermath of the World War and the economic depression had "emphasized and clarified the social and economic responsibilities which rest on government today," but he held that this system of government had always survived the ordeal of changes, "even when recovery necessitated a Civil War.

He declared that "we need freedom to live and let live, which the Constitution guarantees, but we do not want freedom for privilege or freedom to exploit or plunder," continuing with his opposition to the confiscation or division of wealth, and adding, however, that "we do not want the concentrated might and power of wealth controlling or influencing the springs of Government."

The Marylander contended that "the Supreme Court has charted the way" to a "revival of the democracy of the Constitution, faith in its ability to adjust itself to our present-day problems and the determination to practice that faith."

"We hear many suggestions about changing or restricting the power or authority of this tribunal," he asserted. "But why any change? Surely none is justified by the decision which inspires these suggestions.

"The Supreme Court decided that the National Legislature must legislate and cannot pass that duty on to the Executive. That has been the American conception from the beginning. If the Executive takes over the function of the Legislature, then the end is dictatorship. In this country we do not want dictatorship. We want democracy.

"The court decided also that Congress cannot legislate on subjects of commerce which operate wholly within the State. I realize it is more difficult now than in earlier days to draw the line between interstate and intrastate commerce, although the decisions have been liberal in favor of the former.

"But this also has been the American conception from the beginning, and if you abandon it, then you go far toward abandoning local self-government, setting up instead a costly, bureaucratic, high-powered centralized government which always grows by what it feeds on.

"These are long-established principles of the American Government which the Supreme Court upheld. They have worked for a century and a half, and will keep on working if we preserve them. We want to preserve them. We do not want the executive to legislate and we do not want Congress to regulate matters which apply wholly within the individual State.

"We do not want and we do not need any Constitutional amendment to scrap these or any other fundamental institution of our American system of government and democracy.

"So instead of attacking the Supreme Court and the Constitution, let us leave both of them alone, and direct our attention for the future to building upon the basis of the Constitution, and to planning and thinking in conformity with what the Constitution permits, instead of building and planning and thinking along lines which the Constitution prohibits."

Chairman Henry B. Steagall, of the House Banking Committee, countered that the Nation's credit is at "a record high tide."

"Not only the question of the right to sue is involved," said Steagall, "but the question of the sovereign right of the Government to regulate its own currency—which ranks next to the right to declare war."

The resolution was brought into the House under a rule limiting debate to two hours, and this fact drew caustic comment from Republicans.

"We are allowed the large sum of two hours to decide on this last step of repudiation," shouted Hollister, "two hours to say whether sovereign obligations of Government can be recovered."

Just before the final vote, Hollister offered the minority motion to send the bill back to committee, to substitute a new preamble and to restrict its application to gold clause bonds. On a roll call, this also failed by a 250 to 92 record vote.

Steagall told the House that at one time there were $24,000,000,000 in gold clause bonds outstanding, but half of these were surrendered following the joint resolution of June, 1933, declaring invalid all contracts requiring the payment of obligations in gold. Today, he said, there are more than $10,000,000,000 of these certificates outstanding.

"Expense and Annoyance."

"If the holders of these could succeed in showing they have suffered damages, they could collect something like $7,000,000,000," said Steagall.

"That not only would involve the Government in great expense and annoyance, but would penalize every citizen for an act passed by Congress to control the currency."

Republicans retorted that, this being the case, the bill should be limited to gold-clause securities.

"Is it worth $7,000,000,000 to repudiate the solemn promise of the Government," declared Representative Peter A. Cavicchia (Republican), New Jersey. "The promise of the Government can not be measured in terms of money."

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), New York, pointed out that the bill in the Senate will encounter the opposition of two former Democratic Secretaries of the Treasury—Senators Carter Glass, of Virginia, and William Gibbs McAdoo, of California.

U. S. Offerings Sold Out.

At Senate Banking Committee hearings Wednesday both Glass and McAdoo characterized the step as repudiation. The Virginian, in a heated argument with Attorney General Cummings, said the move was "immoral."

Fish paraphrased Glass in his House address.

"To my mind," said the New Yorker, "this amounts to legalized financial immorality."

Supporting Steagall's contentions of unimpaired Federal credit, Representative T. Alan Goldsborough (Democrat), of Maryland, declared that whatever effect the bill might have has long since been discounted. He cited recent heavy oversubscriptions to Treasury bond issues.

To this, Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (Republican), Michigan, replied that the Government's credit was good "because the banks are literally bulging with money and have no place to put it except in Government securities."

The House bill provided:

1. That holders of coins or currencies of the United States be entitled to exchange them, dollar for dollar, for other coins or currencies that are legal tender for public and private debts.

2. That the owners of gold clause United States securities at their election be entitled to receive immediate payment of the stated dollar amount with interest. The period in which owners may receive payment prior to maturity will expire September 1, or on such later date, not after next January 1, as is fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

3. That any consent which the United States may have given to any action against it for recovery on securities or currency, be immediately withdrawn.

4. That no sums be appropriated for payment on securities, coins or currencies, except on an equal and uniform dollar-for-dollar basis.

'AE'

A span of 68 years and George W. Russell, Irish poet, is no more! Yet before death had added the second date, "AE," as he signed himself, managed to leave an indelible mark on his country's artistic, theatrical and agricultural spheres. Deeply imbued with mysticism, he nevertheless possessed to a high degree the practical sturdiness of the typical Irishman. It was characteristic of Russell that the love for nature which he professed in his writings was not mere striving for poetic effect. In 1897, he became an organizer of agricultural societies and as editor of The Irish Homestead did much to teach the farmers more advanced methods of cultivation.

His esthetic side found an outlet not only in verse, but in the drama also, and he became co-founder of the famous Abbey Players Troupe of Dublin. His small house on Rathgar avenue was a veritable salon for the literati of Ireland. Besides being a legend to the youth of the Emerald Isle who longed to write, he was also a helper and an inspiration. The many books dedicated to him in appreciation attest this fact.

It is seldom that the combination of theorist and realist is so delightfully and judiciously blended as it was in the case of George Russell. Realizing his inclination to soar on heights of literary ecstasy, he deliberately and ruthlessly trimmed his poetic style to reach the prosaic farmers whom he was obliged to address. Perhaps the key to his visionary character, which expressed itself in activity as well as dreaming, may be found in two lines of his own verse:

Our hearts were drunk with a beauty

Too Late To Protest.

When Secretary Morgenthau and Attorney General Cummings appeared before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee to urge action on a measure banning gold clause suits, they were greeted with a barrage of harsh epithets. Senators Glass and McAdoo denounced the proposal as "repudiation" and the former declared it to be "immoral." As a matter of fact, it is a waste of nervous energy to shout "repudiation" or "immorality" at this stage of affairs. Repudiation occurred when devaluation was decreed. The alleged "immorality" dates from the day when the Government broke its contract with holders of its promises to pay a certain amount of gold of specified weight and fineness. The situation created by these past acts should now be dealt with realistically in the light of present conditions.

The wrong done by abrogation of the gold clause in Government contracts could not be righted by permitting present uncertainties regarding the status of gold clause bonds to continue. So long as there is a possibility that claims for damages may be recognized, there will be an inducement to speculate on the chance of reaping a profit through suits against the Government. It should be kept in mind, too, that at present Government gold clause bonds sell in the market above par. The Government also proposes to give holders the privilege of immediate redemption at par, if suits for damages are barred. Hence investors may, if they choose, protect themselves against the possibility of future losses on these bonds, by disposing of them on favorable terms. In addition to these rather negative arguments in favor of banning suits, it is evident that any immorality involved in the act of repudiation would be aggravated by affording protection against the consequences of devaluation to some groups of investors, while leaving others unprotected.

In view of the great borrowing program in prospect, the Treasury naturally does not contemplate with equanimity the possibility of damage suits involving bond issues running into billions of dollars. Under the circumstances, the Government's credit would no doubt be strengthened by withdrawal of the right to sue. At any rate, the President's request for legislation banning suits has had no harmful effects upon the bond market. On the contrary, as Secretary Morgenthau stated to the Senate Committee, bond prices rose following his declaration.

For various reasons, therefore, the closing of the courts to damage suits can be defended as a logical outcome of a past act of repudiation. It may be painful, even bitter, to many Americans to have the consequences of repudiation brought so conspicuously to their attention. But it would be folly to pretend that there has been no breach of contract and hence no need for the protective measure sought by the Administration.

Mussolini's Responsibility.

The world is about to witness a most severe test of its peace machinery. War preparations in Italy and Ethiopia have reached a stage where only the most skillful and courageous statesmanship can avoid widespread shedding of blood. Arbitration appears to have broken down. Only the Council of the League of Nations, backed by the moral influence of nearly the entire world, stands between the organized forces of destruction.

In some respects the most disquieting current development is the emotional address of Emperor Haile Selassie to his subjects. No ruler would have made such an appeal in a country like Ethiopia unless he had given up hope of reaching a peaceful settlement. The warriors who follow the Lion of Judah are an independent and fearless lot. Once they have been called upon to defend the independence of their country, it may be difficult for even their sovereign to restrain their war spirit.

For weeks Premier Mussolini has been preparing the Italian public for war. Through censorship of the press and other media of communication he has crushed whatever opposition there may have been to his proposed conquest. The war psychology now prevails throughout Italy. Yet to strengthen the excited public demand for vengeance the government is charging Ethiopian tribesmen with "mutilating numerous children" in an attack on a native village. Similar tales of "atrocities," nearly always fiction, seem to be an inevitable factor in war propaganda.

With the Ethiopian monarch inviting his followers to mingle their blood with his on the battlefield, and the Italian government making elaborate preparations for war, the stage seems to be all set for a major struggle. Will the League of Nations dare to intervene? Both Italy and Ethiopia are members of the league, bound by its covenants "to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league." When that body is confronted by a clear-cut case of threatened aggression and has a high moral principle to govern its action, it is trite to say that its existence as a world-wide political force is at stake.

Fortunately there are indications that the league intends to meet the issue squarely. Since the arbitral commission which has been considering the Italo-Ethiopian dispute has reached an impasse the council will automatically be called into session next week. No doubt tremendous pressure will be brought upon council members to avoid a showdown, but that body is well aware of the fact that its prestige would suffer a terrific blow if Mussolini should be permitted to subjugate Ethiopia with impunity.

Under Article 12 of the covenant members of the league agree "that if there should arise between them any dispute likely to lead to a rupture they will submit the matter either to arbitration or judicial settlement or to inquiry by the council, and they agree in no case to resort to war until three months after the award by the arbitrators or the judicial decision or the report of the council." Addis Ababa is eager to submit the quarrel to settlement through the peace machinery of the league. If the government at Rome refuses to do likewise, Mussolini will take upon his own shoulders responsibility for sabotaging the league as well as for the ghastly consequences which may ensue upon the plateaus of East Africa.

The Weather.

It is hot. Few brow-mopping victims of Uncle Sol's pranks stop to ask why. But to meteorologists there is a reason. Just now these professional weather men are inclined to say that a decrease in rainfall naturally implies an increase in temperature. What they are most interested in, however, are the causes of these debilitating phenomena and a formula by which to forecast them.

Air currents, sun spots, deforestation, land erosion—all are put forward as causes of drought. Probably each has a contributory influence. As to forecasting, the cycle theory has long appealed to observers. Only recently Halbert P. Gillette in a paper read before the American Meteorological Society advanced the argument that rainfall follows a regular schedule.

By plotting a curve of the thickness of rings in the trunk of a giant sequoia he has discovered that from the time of the first ring in 1305 B. C. a series of peaks occurs in a rhythm of slightly more than 152 years. The last peak having occurred in 1863, he concludes that the next valley (i. e., the period of least annual moisture), is due in 1939. No use, then, to talk of a shelter belt of trees in the Midwest for they never would reach maturity, he believes. Crop curtailment is likewise a futile and dangerous policy, he declares, and many a hydroelectric plant and irrigation project is doomed to disappointment.

His theory is bulwarked by graphs of the measurements of annual silt layers, or varves, of ancient glacial lakes and of the time intervals between recessional moraines deposited during the last Ice Age along the Connecticut River Valley. Furthermore, flood level tabulations of the Nile conform with the theory.

Yet much data has been collected to indicate other shorter cycles, ranging in length from 7½ months to 100 years. In fact, proof for almost any cycle at all can be dug up. The difficulty is to discover one that applies everywhere. Some of the oldest rainfall figures in this country are found in Minnesota where annual records have been kept for 100 years. But unfortunately the conclusions to be drawn from these records can not be made to square with more recent figures collected elsewhere. For instance, the year 1894 in Washington was one of maximum precipitation while in Minnesota that particular year showed a minimum rainfall.

The only general conclusion that can fairly be drawn is this: For the past 25 years there has been a country-wide decrease in rainfall. And this, of course, has meant an increase in temperature. Thus it is hot.

'Motives Are Immaterial.'

Overruling Federal Judge Grubb, of Alabama, who declared that the TVA had no legal right to sell power in competition with private utilities, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals says: "It does not appear that the TVA in respect of operations at Wilson Dam is doing or proposes to do anything more than is authorized by the act. This being so, its motives are immaterial."

This extraordinary doctrine enables the court to ignore certain inescapable facts that to the mind of Judge Grubb showed an intention on the part of the TVA to exceed its legal powers. The lower court did not undertake to pass upon the constitutionality of the act establishing the TVA. It assumed, however, that the sale of surplus power was necessarily incidental to the right of the Federal Government to undertake navigation and flood control and to develop power for national defense purposes.

Unless the motives of the TVA are subjected to scrutiny, it is impossible to decide whether it is acting within the limitations imposed upon the Federal Government under the Constitution, or embarking upon a plan for development of power to be sold in competition with private companies. The evidence presented to the lower court indicated that it was in fact preparing to conduct the kind of business previously done by the Alabama Power Co. That company had agreed to sell transmission lines to the TVA, and the PWA had arranged to lend funds to various cities in Alabama to construct municipal distribution systems. Admitting that the Government has a right to sell power as it would any other property, it does not follow that it is entitled to develop and dispose of such power with the intention of establishing a permanent business in competition with privately owned companies.

The Circuit Court concedes that there must be a "reasonable or substantial relation between the production and disposal of the surplus hydroelectric power available at Wilson Dam and the exercise of the war and commerce powers conferred upon Congress." But how is the reasonableness of the relationship to be determined if the court refuses to consider motives and closes its eyes to the underlying purpose for which the TVA was created?

Under such a loose and liberal interpretation of the Constitution, the Government would find little difficulty in extending its power empire throughout the country at the expense of private concerns. Nor would invasion of the field of private enterprise stop there. Under the pretense of regulating commerce and providing for the national defense and common welfare, the Government might proceed to engage in all sorts of private business, if the courts refused to probe into motives and permitted the Federal authorities to define "incidental" powers to suit their particular purposes.

Service Silence.

Unfortunately the measure proposed by Senators Clark and Nye to require all Army, Navy or Marine officers to obtain the approval of their Cabinet officer before making public statements regarding foreign relations appears to be necessary. Not many weeks ago a high ranking admiral had published an article urging war in a certain part of the world as a solution for the problems of industrially starved Europe. Only the good grace of the country referred to in ignoring the tactless suggestion saved the State Department and the entire Nation from an extremely embarrassing situation.

Broadly speaking, the relationship of service officers to international affairs is clearly understood. Whenever their expert advice or necessarily specialized opinions are needed, they should always be available. For the rest, statements concerning the relations of the United States with other countries or otherwise involving international issues must be left to officials who are responsible for this aspect of our national policy.

Particularly in days when the drumheads of the world are stretched to an ominous tautness, public silence on the part of service officers is even better than golden.

The principal reason why it's so difficult to create public sentiment in favor of a 'soak-the-rich" program is because even those who are broke expect to be rich about year after next.

There seems to be no way to adjust everything. If women were persuaded to wear cotton stockings, a lot of deserving silkworms would be thrown out of work. And so it goes.

The decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston that the AAA processing tax is unconstitutional must have given the New Dealers a severe shock. While their statement that they will press for an early decision by the Supreme Court appears to indicate a fair degree of confidence, the fact that the Court of Appeals ruled adversely probably means that the highest tribunal will do likewise.

We trust that such a decision will not catch the Administration flatfooted. When the Blue Eagle blew up, there was nothing to indicate that the President or his advisers had made any preparations for such an eventuality. That must not happen again.

Pro's And Con's Of Fusion Government

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As one who has resided in Montgomery County for 40 years, I am very much disturbed over the editorial in The Post of June 22 concerning the Montgomery County government.

Your editorial department has been imposed upon. Instead of an increase in taxes being due to the "ineptitude" of the recently elected Fusion county commissioners, such increase in taxes is due directly to the financial condition of the county left by the Democratic board repudiated at the polls last November; and instead of increasing salaries except where those increases were made necessary by the Democratic Legislature, the salaries have been reduced. The editorial in question was, therefore, grossly unfair and I feel that you should know the facts. What are they?

In a budget sent out by the Democratic county commissioners, shortly before the election, the only item for the payment of interest was approximately $60,000, whereas the new county commissioners are faced with interest payments of approximately $400,000 per year, which, because of their election promises, they are trying to pay out of current taxes. To add to this, the new county commissioners found that the Democratic county commissioners had overdrawn their account with the State roads commission by approximately $250,000. This must be repaid.

Therefore, notwithstanding a lowering instead of an increase of those salaries which are under the control of the county commissioners, the commissioners find that they are compelled to increase taxes to make up for the extravagance of their predecessors. Such extravagance may be seen from the fact that whereas the bonded indebtedness of the county was about $600,000 when the Lee machine assumed control about 15 years ago, it had jumped to nearly $8,000,000 when they lost control last November, and this does not include the Sanitary Commission bonds.

As to the removal of the Democratic office holders: I am strongly for civil service, but civil service does not call for retaining in office those who were perniciously active politically. As one example, reference may be made to the police force of the county which was engaged in political activity to perpetuate the most extravagant government Montgomery County has ever had.

I am and have been a Republican all my life, but I am watching the Fusion county government and hoping for its success, notwithstanding the fact that I know that I shall have to pay much larger taxes at a time when my income is seriously reduced.

THOMAS E. ROBERTSON.
Chevy Chase, Md., June 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I wish to take this occasion to express my personal appreciation as a resident voter and taxpayer of Takoma Park, Montgomery County, Md., for the splendid editorial which appeared under date of June 22 in The Post entitled "Confusionists."

It is unquestionably true that the so-called Fusion movement, with the constant squabbling which is going on in the distribution of patronage between the Democrats of the coalition movement and the Republicans, can not endure, and it would seem that in view of the fact that the Democratic Party is the dominant political party in Montgomery County that there should be a complete reorganization and realignment of the Democratic forces in the county.

The Republican Party, as is well known, is the minority political party of the county and can not, of course, except in rare instances, hope to achieve the success of its candidates unless by the disaffection or defection of disgruntled and dissatisfied members of the Democratic Party.

It is my hope that in the public interest and in the interest of the general welfare of the entire population of Montgomery County, irrespective of political considerations, that steps will be taken at the earliest possible date to effectuate a complete reorganization within the ranks of the Democratic Party. The public interest requires and the public conscience in my judgment demands such a reorganization and I am willing to contribute, as a loyal Democrat, to any worth while and serious effort to effectuate such a reorganization upon a progressive platform and declaration of principles in the interest of good, honest and efficient government for Montgomery County.

LLEWELLYN JORDAN.
Takoma Park, Md., July 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am writing you to congratulate you upon the very fine editorial recently published in The Post.

Paragraph three of the Fusion platform read, "We condemn the creation of unnecessary public jobs for political purposes and demand the elimination of unnecessary jobs, boards and expenditures." In May, 1934, under Democratic administration, there were 182 employes in the county by actual count while in May, 1935, under Fusion control, there were 190 employes, and the entire pay roll will show an increase between $2,000 and $3,000 per month over the corresponding period a year ago.

The editorial is supported by such facts as the recent appointment to the supervisor of county aid, a builder, who has not to my knowledge ever had one day's previous experience in social work or work of any similar nature whatsoever. The appointment of a county assessor by a man whom I do not believe has ever had a day's experience in assessing either land or improvements. Also the appointment of engineer to the health department, when they appointed a farmer who had never had one day's experience and has never qualified as an engineer. As a result of this appointment all State and Federal aid was withdrawn from the local health department and it had a record of such high efficiency that it was the only county health department in the United States that received Federal aid. Another outstanding example of this would be the appointment as the chief of police of a farmer whom I do not believe had ever had a day's experience in police work or any work of this character whatsoever. In addition to this they had discharged all employes of the treasurer's office, under the obligation of collecting and accounting for nearly $2,000,000 per year, excepting two, right while he was in the very midst of preparing his yearly tax sale.

The article is further warranted by such actions as obtaining the employes to sign contracts at a time when the ones elected by them from their party to the Legislature were introducing bills to reduce salaries in a futile attempt to try to tie the Legislature's hands. This, in my judgment, was the most babyish and ridiculous move ever made by anyone supposed to be old enough to have governmental experience. Further, by such actions as two men being suggested for the position of chief of police, one a Fusion Democrat and the other a Fusion Republican. One man had formerly served as sheriff of the county and as chief of police, the other having had no experience as to police duties and neither having had any experience in assessing. They made the public announcement that whichever one received the appointment of chief of police the other would be appointed assessor, and the one who had had no experience in police duties was appointed chief of police and the former sheriff and chief of police, who had had no experience in assessing, was appointed county assessor. After the appointment of this chief of police the Democratic Fusionists publicly announced that they intended to try to induce the county commissioners to reverse this action, but finally abandoned the attempt.

STEDMAN PRESCOTT.
Rockville, Md., June 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

With reference to your editorial of June 22 entitled "Confusionists" I should like to offer the following facts and let you determine if there was an error.

You state in the third paragraph that scarcely any of the officials capable of holding any consistent administrative policy are left. It is true that it has been necessary to make changes and I believe it is always the policy in a change of administration to appoint employes in sympathy with the new order. In doing this only persons having the necessary qualifications for efficiency have been appointed. To show you the necessity for some of the changes, I would recommend for your perusal the report of the recent audit of the county offices made by a disinterested agency not affiliated politically with the Republican or Fusion party.

In another paragraph you state this turnover is responsible for the increase in the tax rate. This statement is entirely erroneous, for the increase in rate is due principally to three items in this year's budget.

Item one, additional allowance for the public schools. The board of education requested $150,919.50 more for the schools this year than was requested last year. This the board of education states is necessary owing to the depleted condition of books, school equipment, etc.

The second item that accounts for a large amount of the increase is the provision made by the present board of county commissioners for payment of interest on the county bonds. The previous administration last year only provided for payment of $67,819.53 on an interest obligation of $424,335. The difference was borrowed, and thus added to the indebtedness of the county. While the present board of county commissioners is not responsible for the large bonded indebtedness of the county, they feel that it is their duty to levy the necessary taxes to meet the obligation, and thus maintain the credit and good name of the county. Taxes must be levied to meet the interest on bonds or the money must be borrowed for that purpose. The present county commissioners feel to borrow money for that purpose is uneconomic, if not dangerous.

The third item of additional expense this year is the police department. The cost of this service was increased by the Prescott bill in the last Legislature, which added $19,270.34 to the county expense for police service.

I am sure The Post at all times wishes to present a fair and accurate statement of affairs in the surrounding counties on all important subjects. The Fusion party in control of the county will be glad to be of service at any time in furnishing pertinent information regarding the conduct of affairs through its administration and feels sure that The Post will welcome the opportunity of keeping its readers accurately informed.

Notes On Boondoggling

By Ralph E. Renaud,
Special Correspondence of The Post.
New York.

THE trouble with this country is that half the people don't know how the other half boondoggle.

Boondoggling is spreading in our cities like the wild currant pest in the country—or, if you prefer, the wild current test in the Tennessee Valley. The greater the number of people on relief the bigger the boondoggling. The question is up again in New York as to whether 'tis nobler in the mind to boondoggle or not to boondoggle, and Gen. Hugh Johnson, who might have invented the word himself, has decided in its favor. He says the various boondoggling projects will be continued, at least for the present. The loud shouts of joy of the boondogglers is accompanied in a minor key by something that sounds like a death rattle in the throat of the taxpayer.

The difficulty with boondoggling is that it takes so many forms. Not every one can make a leather doodad to put on a Boy Scout's hat, which, it appears, is the true essence of boondoggling. Nor can every one excell in the derivative arts such as tap-dancing, making maps of the migrations of the Dorians who invaded prehistoric Greece, whittling jungle animals out of soap, tatting, figuring out the number of times Shakespeare used the article "the" or the preposition "of," devising gadgets to open milk bottles or get waste tooth paste back into the tube, making decorative leather handkerchiefs and sofa pillows stuffed with dried celery foliage, or, indeed, what not. The application of what not is undoubtedly extending rapidly.

In view of the limitation of human talent many people on relief invent their own boondoggling. You can scarcely pick up your newspaper these days to read the current accounts of stick-ups, kidnapings, drunk-rollings, safe crackings, or other crimes of the more exuberant type, without also reading that the prisoner and his family were on relief. That part of it is all right. It is quite okeyedoke for the taxpayer to support the criminal. Nowadays he expects to, and he will be obliged to, anyway, if the offender happens to be sent to jail.

But the point is that these little crimes, inspired no doubt as a reaction from the boredom of being supported at public expense, are probably just a form of boondoggling. That gentleman who hit the citizen over the head with a blunt instrument was doubtless unskillful at making leather handkerchiefs. But he knew by instinct the best outlet for his creative urge which was raising lumps on people's skulls. That other gentleman who poked a pistol in the feller's face was almost certainly slow and clumsy with his tap-dancing. On the other hand, he was naturally quick on the trigger. It is not to be assumed, of course, that the authorities encourage these more primitive forms of boondoggling. Nevertheless, they manage to get the relief check around each week.

It is fairly obvious that the country will soon be divided into those who boondoggle and those who don't. Those who, through habit perhaps, continue the old-fashioned practice of earning a living have little time or energy left for boondoggling. The taxpayer, to be sure, gets an opportunity once a year to boondoggle a little when he makes out his income tax return. In States which impose an income tax of their own, of course, the opportunity is doubled and now that the cities and even smaller political units are beginning to consider the income tax favorably the chance may be indefinitely extended. Thus, in time, the taxpayer, through the natural process of exhaustion, ceases to pay any taxes whatever and can devote all his time to boondoggling. When we have become a nation of boondogglers, down to the last man, woman and child, we can start all over again and, just for the novelty of it, try a little ordinary work.

A while back this column carried a piece about Dr. Raymond Ditmars, curator of the Bronx Zoo, one of the great authorities on the world's serpents, who says he has never seen a snake swallow its young and has never met anyone who has seen such a thing. Now comes Henry W. Hodges, Clerk of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, who writes your correspondent as follows:

"I would like to call your attention to the fact that when I was a very young boy I, together with my sister, Mary, and several other children, was playing back of my father's home in Lagrange, Ga., when we were witnesses to the actual happening of this event. This was about 1868-69 or '70. It made a deep impression on us all. Our attention was called to the event by a noise resembling the clucking of a hen to her brood. Looking around for its occasion, we were surprised to see a snake with its mouth wide open and a number of small snakes running down their mother's mouth, at least six or eight of them."

We certainly do not doubt that Mr. Hodges saw exactly what he describes. But we would like to call his attention to another dictum of Dr. Ditmars. An 8-foot cat snake has just been imported into New York from the Malay Peninsula. The natives say that this snake mews like a cat during the night, but Dr. Ditmars declares that no snake is known ever to have made a noise with its mouth except to hiss. And so, as for clucking . . .

Talmadge Pulled Off.

ALTHOUGH the visit to the White House of Gov. Talmadge of Georgia has been associated with the squabble over the $19,000,000 highway allotment to the State, it was really with a view to bringing him into camp and the result of more than a month's negotiations back and forth. Talmadge may break out again but the understanding is that in the future he will play ball.

The Administration realized just about the time it came in that it would be impossible to get along with Huey Long. It took the offensive against him both in the way of patronage and in pursuing an income tax inquiry against him and his lieutenants. It is not generally understood but Long's fight ever since has been more to head the Administration off than to gratify any personal presidential ambitions.

• • • •

With Talmadge it was different. When he bobbed up attacking the Administration there was considerable surprise. This was just about the last place a fire was expected. And something the political boys here haven't been able to understand is why Talmadge could so successfully carry on his attack in a State which has received so much from the Administration and where Mr. Roosevelt is presumably so popular. It was where his Presidential boom took on momentum. The fact is, however, that Talmadge was going right along getting stronger and stronger. There were reports some time ago that Eastern moneyed Democrats, appreciating his effectiveness, planned to make extensive use of him.

The only serious slip he has made, apparently, was when several weeks ago he referred to Mr. Roosevelt's infirmity. There was a strong adverse reaction to this and a series of popular meetings was held against him in the State. After they had had their brief run, however, he seems to have regained his popularity.

• • • •

On the occasion of this personal remark about Mr. Roosevelt, the Governor's chief journalistic supporter, Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, who heretofore had taken sort of an attitude that he liked Talmadge in spite of his faults, editorially chastised him. Since then Mr. Howell and other influences have been working on him to get him into camp. They have apparently been successful.

It wouldn't be right to say the agreement on the handling of the $19,000,000 road fund did it because heretofore Talmadge has been taking their money and fighting them too. Ray Moley, editor of the Administration's mouthpiece, Today, thought Talmadge was so ungrateful that he sent a writer to Georgia to get a story to that effect.

The peace agreement will very probably cause the friends of Mr. Howell, who admire him, to observe that he can certainly take it.

He had reason to expect an ambassadorial post at the hands of the Administration, but he couldn't be accommodated because something similar would have had to be done for his rival, Jack Cohen, publisher of the Atlanta Journal, now dead.

• • • •

What it did do was so small as to cause the "old man" considerable embarrassment. It put out the story that he was being considered for a particular ambassadorial post which is usually satisfying to citizens of lesser light. It only served to embarrass Mr. Howell.

Then when the Administration got into its air-mail debacle it fell back upon the time-worn practice of setting up a commission to make a study. Then it had the brilliant idea that this would also be a fine way to do something for the "old man." It gave him a commission and $50,000 and he went to Paris and Rome and really studied aviation. He wasn't expected to take it this seriously, of course. Evidence of this is the fact that when, after several months and much study, he made his recommendations no attention was paid to them. This is known to have burned him up and his friends said, "Well, the old man will let the Administration alone now."

But he didn't. After all of that he had another urge to help and this time his contribution is the fiery governor, Mr. Talmadge. And that is a help. It affords an interesting insight into the philosophy of a man Mr. Howell's age, too. He must be opposed to 90 per cent of what this crowd here is doing. But he probably figures he has seen enough of life not to get hot and bothered about anything. He's a grand old man, too.

England And Abyssinia

By Edward Acheson,

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London (By Mail).

THE American business which advertises itself "From a Sandwich to a National Institution" now finds a prototype in Africa. In less than a year Abyssinia has developed "From a Joke to an International Problem." And nowhere is concern more acute at the moment than in London.

Although the Tory press still clings tenaciously to the misapprehension that England is trembling for the safety of Lake Tsana and the Blue Nile, the absurdity of such an explanation is patent. Any direct provocation of Great Britain by Italy is, of course, unthinkable: Mussolini would have to be of peculiarly unsound mind to choose that particular method of committing suicide.

Obviously and necessarily, England's anxiety over the Italio-Abyssinian imbroglio is centered in the league and in the league's prestige: if proof is necessary, witness the 11,000,000 votes, recorded in the recent "peace ballot," for adherence to league membership. And even Mr. Baldwin can sound like a Socialist when he says that the covenant of the League of Nations is the sheet-anchor of British policy.

It may be so. But a critic would not have to be very carping to make out a convincing case to the contrary, since the tactlessness of almost every recent British diplomatic gesture is so amazing as to be almost unbelievable. And the moment is especially inopportune for tactlessness. Definitely the league is in a delicate condition: It has suffered two severe shocks; another may prove fatal. Yet, if Italy be coerced, she will resign. And a league without Italy or Germany could not pretend to authority even in Europe. On the other hand, if Italy be permitted to do as she pleases, the league is admittedly useless. Either way the idea of collective security stands to suffer disastrously.

• • • •

ENGLAND, true to her traditions, has set about discovering a middle course. From the outset only one was possible, a united front between France and England, which could offer a face-saving compromise to Italy. England could not and would not fight alone on the side of Abyssinia: Italy was full aware of that fact: hence the ability of the league to compromise depended on the agreement of France and England.

Whereupon with uncanny ineptitude England made three moves which destroyed even the slightest hope of French cooperation. England signed the German Naval Agreement, England made the Zeila offer, which if accepted would have established a competitior to France's port of Jibuti on the Red Sea, and finally, and most unfortunate of all, England made the Zeila offer without French knowledge.

In this connection there is a growing suspicion in England that Mr. Eden's signal failure in the Paris-Rome mission was neither unexpected nor unwelcome to some of the older but less conspicuous diplomats of the country. Whether there was a bag to be held, and Mr. Eden elected, or whether the bag was especially constructed for his inconvenience is a moot point, but whatever its history, the results are the same and unfortunate.

• • • •

IN ALL probability, British policy in the last two months has definitely cleared the way for Mussolini's frankly land-grabbing scheme in Africa, and for the further dimming if not the total eclipse of league prestige.

The more bellicose newspapers in London even welcome the prospect. They herald a return to "rugged individualism" in armaments and "the good right arm" in international affairs. Germany and Japan, they point out, have benefited immeasurably by deserting the league, and the liberal demurrer that "burglar's profits are not a conclusive argument for anarchy" is drowned in the howled derision of the league's ineffectiveness.

Concesison to Italy has, apparently, failed. Coercion and acquiesence seem both to lead to the same unhappy consequences for collective security. England has not found the middle course, and war appears inevitable.

On the other hand, it is difficult to conceive of any British policy which would, at this late date, have produced a different result. For Abyssinia has now entered irrevocably into European politics from which unhappy position more than one king's horses seem to be necessary to extricate her.

• • • •

BY delay and indecision, and through disagreement of its members, the league has permitted the conquests of Ethiopia to become an "admitted objective" of Italian policy. Mussolini's personal ascendancy depends upon it; to be restrained by the league would now be as fatal to his leadership as military defeat in Africa. And France dares not risk that, because of the effect on Austria, which, except for Italy's restraining hand and money, is generally thought to be ready to topple into the waiting arms of Nazi Germany. Hungary's action in such an event would not be difficult to foresee. "Revision of boundaries" is the be-all and end-all of the Hungarian foreign office.

Germany is the other great "revisionist" power. Freed of the threat of an Italian-supported Austria, Hungary would undoubtedly throw in her lot with the antitreaty elements. The Polish position at the moment is ambiguous; the new overt friendship with Germany is probably more apparent than real; what Poland would gain by an alteration of her boundaries is problematical; what she would lose is no problem at all. However, a treaty does exist which would link Poland to the German-Austro-Hungarian scheme of things. To prevent this dreaded combination, France is quite willing to sacrifice the prestige of the league.

Hence, Abyssinia, for her sins, has become "a factor in the European situation," likely to cause a realignment of the status quo as against the Revisionist powers.

• • • •

AND England, as her recent flustered gestures would suggest, is in a fairly complete quandary. Her historic game of "keeping the balance of power" has become increasingly difficult since the war. Too many "unknown factors" (e. g. the German air-force revelation) tip the scales overnight. And since Great Britain "has no policy, only interests" and since it is far from clear how these interests can best be served, Mr. Eden and Sir Samuel Hoare have fallen back on an attempt to "keep the peace."

Failing this—and in all probability it will fail—England's immediate interests will, paradoxically, suffer least by Italian success.

A Nazi Anschluss with Hungary as an appendage would cause a first class crisis in European affairs, would tend to align England with France and Russia, and deprive her of what small degree of "disinterest" she can now muster.

It is significant, too, that there should be a growing uneasiness over the attitude of the natives in England's African colonies. Frequent "letters to the press" have pointed this out. An African victory over an European power might have unpleasant repercussions. And a fell-informed section of British opinion seems to regard a prompt Italian success as by no means taken for granted. It is pointed out that Mussolini can not "wear down" his enemy as England did the Boers; he can not "learn to fight" these people as the English did the Afghans: Time and morale are far too precious. And once started, he can not stop short of a proconsul's victory. The experience of the Spaniards against the Riffs is cited, and, of course, the disaster at Adowa. Several writers claim, further, that Lawrence with his Bedouins in Arabia has demonstrated conclusively the inefficiency of a modern army operating in wide areas. Abyssinia is as large as France and Germany put together, and her 10,000,000 inhabitants, warlike, unencumbered by civilization. An Italian general once said that Abyssinia could be conquered as soon as all Abyssinians wore shoes. But they don't as yet.

• • • •

HOWEVER, Mussolini seems determined on his African adventure. And England which refused co-operative interference on behalf of Austria can hardly interfere single-handed on the side of Abyssinia. Without French aid she can only look on and think—think what steps can later be taken to revive the league and the idea of collective security after the shattering blow Mussolini has dealth to each—and watch Austria in the event that Mussolini becomes too occupied in Africa to sustain the pressure he now exerts on that country.

Today in England public interest is centered in Addis Ababa and Rome—but Whitehall's chief concern is elsewhere—in Geneva and through Geneva to the real center of the European problem, Vienna.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

On Biting Apples.

OLIVE MOORE comes to us from England with rather peculiar heraldings. Of her volume of notebook jottings, miscellaneous thoughts and sharp aphorisms—"The Apple Is Bitten Again" (Dutton, $2)—Richard Aldington remarks: "Ought to be recognized. But it seems hopeless to expect to make any impression on the soggy pudding of British minds. They only want more soggy pudding to console themselves." Mr. Aldington, it might be added, gets a nice mention in the book. And a gentleman on the London Evening Standard has this to say: "There will not be found in any country more than a handful of people to appreciate the work of Olive Moore."

Now an intellectual snob is just as bad as any other kind, and I confess that the airiness of these sentences cooled somewhat my first attitude toward the book—a feeling warmed in no degree by the frontispiece portrait of Miss Moore, in the shape of a sculptured figure carved by one Sava Botzaris and resembling nothing so much as the priestess of some decadent erotic cult of the first century Alexandria so dear to Pierre Louys. Stir in the information that the book is said to have been boycotted in England, top off with the fact that I have a complete lack of data on the author and it would seem as if we were to have a fine dish of the hoity-toity.

And is it? I am not quite ready to believe that Miss Moore is the second Eve, to bite the apple and attain the serpent's forecast that "your eyes shall be opened and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil," but yet there is here a sort of flaying of shibboleth and a defense of plausible ideas which are both rare and titillating.

• • • •

IT WOULD be attractive to fill out two columns with quotations from Miss Moore's thinking bag. Here, though, are a salient few. She adores the creative artist—"Only the creative artist has anything to give. Others give externally; paying in kind or coin. But the artist gives of himself; gift inevitable, unpremeditated, unceasing." If that seem not overly fresh, hear this—"The most formidable of Big Business Men is at the level of the humblest street-stall vender. The humblest of artists, in direct line of succession to Giotto and Michelangelo."

On the other hand, she has all her claws out for woman as creative artist. This is her answer to the famous plaint of Mrs. Virginia Woolf—"Five hundred a year and a Room of One's Own. If creative achievement were a matter of a room of one's own, then since the first dawn in which the first woman was pushed to safety in the first cave, she should have been the world's creative artist. At no time in the world's history has woman been without a room of her own. But it has always been the kitchen. Then write on the kitchen table! Paint on the kitchen walls! etc. . . . The bitter story of the arts urges one to ask what man has ever had a room of his own that he did not have to earn with cadging, pandering, humiliation, fill with wives and children and bailiffs, and still produce by the spirit-alchemy of sweat and desire the works he is remembered by?"

On culturists of the body—"Compared with the thinking person, the strongest athlete has an aura of decomposition. One senses the body's invisible disintegration. Only in thinkers does one avoid this immediate sense of flesh decay. They have another dimension; a respite."

And finally—"Meet People Once Only. There is an eagerness, a shy intimacy, a charm of the unfamiliar, each is out to please, the hours pass prettily. But not again. Afterward there are rumors, acquaintances in common, personalities, irritations. And all that was impersonal, spontaneous, vivid, becomes the suspicion, gossip and familiarity which is friendship."

• • • •

WITH the chairman calling time on me, I can only remark that scarcely one of her observations—as easily paradoxieal as Wilde's "Work is the curse of the drinking classes"—but can be taken apart and strewn to the winds by a fairish wit in the space of three seconds which, of course, is the zest of such personal books.

Still, it seems to me that people who bite apples should chew them thoroughly.

Austrian Regency Is Otto's Scheme

Would Take Up Reigns In Mother's Name.

By the United Press.

Castle Steenockerzeel, Belgium, July 18.—Archduke Otto, of Hapsburg, rehabilitated as an Austrian citizen and again in possession of the property of his ancient house, caused a sensation in monarchist and anti-monarchist circles when he indicated he plans to return to Austria as regent, acting in the name of his mother, Zita, as empress. The plan was revealed in a letter written by Otto thanking the mayor of Langenrohr, Austria, for conferment of honorary citizenship.

He contemplated regency instead of emperorship, presumably because of recent Castle Steenockerzeel negotiations with members of the Austrian nobility.

The Archduke Eugene handed the letter to Langenrohr's mayor during citizenship ceremonies yesterday. Otto wrote:

"I am convinced I am more able to fulfill my duty to Austria, for during each day of my work as regent I will request God's benediction for my task and Austria."

Otto and Zita remain at Castle Steenockerzeel pending decision as to how they shall return to Vienna under last week's laws repealing the anti-Hapsburg decrees of 1919.

clared he would not hesitate to shed his blood.

The emperor's claim of unity was not an idle boast. At conclusion of his speech Somail, Ogaden chief, and the Mohammedan Kadi of Addis Ababa rose and asserted that Haile Selassie's Islam subjects would "fight to the death" beside their Christian brothers.

The emperor accused Il Duce of "inflaming his soldiers with a vision of writing a glorious page in history."

He warned the Italians that although they are fortified with all modern weapons "you will yet see how a united country can defend its people and emperor."

The Emperor charged for 40 years Italy has desired to conquer Ethiopia.

"Last summer the desire was more openly manifested," he said. "Then came the incident at Gondar. Then Ualual. Not content with killing our soldiers, Italy demanded apologies and indemnities. Conscious of our rights, we demanded conciliation and arbitration in accordance with treaties.

"Ethiopia menaces nobody. But she is menaced and will defend herself."

Protectorate Spurned.

The Emperor made it clear to all that no form of protectorate from any foreign power will be acceptable to Ethiopia.

Haise Selassie refrained from mentioning mobilization in his speech to Parliament. He has made it clear that once his troops are formally mobilized there will be no restraining them from hostilities.

During the army review Prince Makonnen managed his big, white Arab charger perfectly. He and the Emperor dismounted under a canopy on one side of a square for swearing in the troops' filling the other three sides.

The royal standard beside the Emperor was attended by the war minister. Imperial Guard officers successively grasped the corner of the standard with their left hands, raised their right and recited the oath of fidelity after their commander in stentorian tones.

Italian Protectorate Proposed by France

By the United Press.

Rome, July 18.—France today proposed that Italy be given a protectorate over Ethiopia, similar to that of Britain over Egypt.

Spirited diplomatic exchanges passed between Rome, Paris, and London in efforts to achieve a settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. France was willing to grant Italy a greater share in Ethiopian affairs, but Britain registered steadfast opposition. London apparently was not willing to permit any area within what is regarded as a British sphere of influence to be placed in other hands.

The French gesture seemed to advance an Ethiopian solution yet it failed to arouse much enthusiasm in Italy. While British opposition to the French plan seemed doomed to failure, the French attitude was expected to influence materially the forthcoming League of Nations Council.

Premier Benito Mussolini was expected to accept league intervention only if it would grant him a mandate or protectorate over Ethiopia, a move certain to be opposed by force of arms by Emperor Haile Selassie.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Rome quoted the authoritative review Affari Esteri as saying Italy's aims in Ethiopia were absolute control of Ethiopia's military force and the right to settle Italians in the African empire—Editor's Note.]

Apparently not greatly disturbed by diplomatic events, Il Duce, as war minister, hastened his war preparations.

He issued a decree raising wages of officers, soldiers and militiamen in East Africa effective August 1.

He telegraphed East African colonial officials, praising progress made in establishing efficient public works, transportation and communications systems. He praised steps for public welfare and improvement of sanitation, "especially now that the population has been augmented by newly arriving Italian troops."

Italians believed the offers of both Britain and France for a settlement are still so far from meeting Italian aspirations that little hope can be based on current negotiations.

There was evidence that direct negotiations with powerful Ethiopian tribes are under way in an effort to win them from the side of their ruler. Therefore Emperor Haile Selassie's speech to his Parliment in Addis Ababa was taken calmly in Italy.

$4,000,000 Destroyer Is Launched at Quincy

Quincy, Mass., July 18 (AP).—The U. S. S. Phelps, $4,000,000 destroyer, was launched today at the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the first of four such fighting ships ordered by the United States Navy.

The 1,850-ton vessel was christened by Mrs. Richard A. Kearny, of Washington, granddaughter of Admiral Thomas Stowell Phelps, Civil War naval officer.

Reich Presses Religious War On Catholics titled to wear uniforms and engage in mass sports.

Goering's decree was interpreted as meaning that all priests in Prussia must take an oath of allegiance to the state. Henceforth they will preach their Sunday sermons under direct supervision of the secret police. They will be liable to imprisonment if they criticize the state.

Goering said the state is determined to guarantee the integrity of all Christian churches, including the Catholic, but enumerated alleged serious shortcomings of the Catholic clergy. He took special exception to the Catholics using the greeting:

"Hail our heavenly Fuehrer Jesus Christ."

He condemned severely Catholic priests for criticizing sterilization legislation.

Arrest of numerous clergymen is considered inevitable. The decree orders authorities to proceed drastically.

"The church must not organize political forces for the ostensible purpose of meeting supposed threats from the state," Goering said.

He mentioned especially church opposition to sterilization propaganda by Minister of Interior Wilhelm Frick.

"Things have gone so far that in many districts the only impression the faithful gather at Sunday services is that the Catholic Church rejects the institutions of the Nazi state," Goering said.

Press Intensified Drive.

"Under official oath church dignitaries owe respect to the government. They are pledged to make the clergy observe the same respect. Hitherto all warnings have been fruitless. Now I expect from all judicial authorities rigorous application of existing legal provisions."

Moves against the clergy coincided with an intensified press campaign against the Jews.

"No Jews at Bathing Beaches," was bannerlined in Der Angriff. The newspaper reported expulsion of Jews from bathing beaches at Breslau.

At Karlsruhe three Jews were arrested for remarks against Hitler. Others were arrested for alleged irregularities in a butcher shop. Numerous Jews and Aryans have been arrested for alleged intimate relationships.

Afternoon newspapers bannerlined Goering's decrees. They published details of anti-government activities in Catholic circles. The newspaper Daz said an unnamed priest in the Rhineland gave political prisoners spiritual advice. He was alleged to have said France soon would march into Germany and overthrow the Nazi regime. He described Germany as never so disunited as now.

Daz said widespread secret Catholic political propaganda exists, with its favorite theme that war and chaos soon will give rise to a new Germany "of Christian charity."

Bingham Cites Kellogg Treaty As Peace Hope

By the United Press.

London, July 18.—U. S. Ambassador Robert W. Bingham today communicated to Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare "the hope of the United States for a peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute."

Bingham referred specifically to the Kellogg pact. Bingham's communication followed revelation that for several days London and Washington have been in close contact regarding the East African crisis.

The "hope" of the ambassador was in line with the attitude taken by Secretary of State Cordell Hull after Ethiopia asked the United States to consider means of persuading Italy to observe her pact obligations.

Hoare heard Bingham after the Cabinet discussed the Italo-Ethiopia crisis.

The former secretary had addressed the Foreign Press Association, describing his policy as "pledged to attempts to make peace and help reconciliation, the while facing facts."

Viscount Cecil, head of the League of Nations Union, had said:

"None who considers the vast black populations of Africa and their contacts with Europeans in many parts of the continent can regard with equanimity a war between white and black Ethiopia. Whatever its immediate result, it holds the possibility of unlimited horrors in future."

Bride Perfectly Happy, Although 'in Prison'

Madison, Wis., July 18 (AP).—The bride of William Ellery Leonard asserted today that three weeks' voluntary confinement in her poet-husband's "phobic prison" has left her supremely happy.

"Do you suppose I would have entered it if I hadn't known I'd be happy here?" she inquired in answer to a question. "Does not any woman, marrying the man she loves, enter into a 'prison' of some sort? "For some women that 'prison' is mental, its walls the limited mentality of their husbands. Mine happens to be physical—and were I to make the choice a thousand times, it would always be the same."

Leonard, professor of English at the University of Wisconsin has a "distance phobia" and for 20 years has not ventured more than six blocks from his home.

Three Powers Contest Japan's Asiatic Moves

Mongols, Chinese, Soviets Figure in New Border 'Incidents.'

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, July 18.—Japan, steadily expanding her influence in continental Asia, came into conflict with Mongols, Russians and Chinese today.

A new crisis was reached in negotiations for settlement of border disputes between Manchukuo, Japanese-dominated empire, and independent Outer Mongolia, Rengo (Japanese) news agency reported, with the possibility that Manchukuo might demand demilitarization of part of Mongolia.

Earlier Rengo dispatches from Harbin, Manchukuo, said Japanese seeking alluvial gold in the Amur River July 9 were fired upon by Soviet guards, and the engine of their small river boat was disabled.

Manchukuo's foreign office announced its intention to protest energetically to Moscow this latest in the long series of "incidents" along the disputed Manchukuo-Siberia border.

Advisers Demanded.

Meanwhile reports from Kalgan, Chahar Province, North China, said the Japanese Kwantung army had demanded that Japanese advisers be placed in all departments of the Chahar government. Chinese termed this an indication of further Japanese expansion in North China.

Japan's newest verbal clash with Outer Mongolia occurred at Manchuli, the Rengo correspondent reported, when the Japanese member of the Manchukuan delegation delivered "representations on behalf of the Manchukuan foreign office." These were said to insist on "an exchange of resident representatives between Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia, with freedom of facilities to communicate with their respective governments in order to prevent a misunderstanding in disputes between the two countries."

Should Mongolia refuse, Rengo's dispatch said, "Manchukuo may be constrained to request Outer Mongolia to withdraw all troops from the area east of Tomskutsum," village southwest of Lake Bor.

Pressure Expected.

What would happen should this second request be refused was not stated, but the implication was that military pressure would follow with the Japanese army, on behalf of its protege Manchukuo, using all means necessary to compel demilitarization of Mongolian territory just as parts of Chahar and Hopei provinces, China, were demilitarized.

It was learned that Manchukuo first proposed the exchange of resident representatives July 4 in much milder terms. This proposal the Mongolians rejected July 13.

Details of the demands were kept secret, but the consensus of non-Japanese authorities was that they were tantamount to demanding that Manchukuo—or its protector, the Japanese army—be allowed to station missions at Urga (Ulan Bator) and other Mongolian cities equipped with wireless communication with Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo.

Bodies of 7 Found After Mine Blast

2 Still Unrecovered Deep in Kentucky Coal Shaft.

By the Associated Press.

Van Lear, Ky., July 18.—One by one the bodies of seven of the nine victims of a coal mine gas explosion were brought back to their wives and children today. Two other victims still lay 1½ miles back under the hills, with gas and debris delaying recovery of the bodies.

Twenty-seven children were left fatherless by the disaster, as all nine miners were married and all but one had children.

John F. Daniel, chief of the State Bureau of Mines and Minerals, and representatives of the United States Bureau of Mines began an inquiry into the cause of the disaster. The nine men who were killed were in mine No. 5 of the Consolidation Coal Co.

Rescue squads reached the first two bodies this morning, those of Virgil Clay, 21, and Roy Murray, 38. Several hours later they came upon the bodies of William Kretzer, 41; his brother, Charles Kretzer, 46; J. E. Vaughan, 52; Derwood Litz, 34, and Sherley Hereford, 38. The two bodies that were blocked off were those of John Gool, 56, and Frank Tuzzy, 45.

Don't Mention It.

Work Started On Arlington Road Program

$40,000 to Be Spent Grading and in Surfacing of 30 Miles.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Work was started yesterday on improvement of county roads along which the sewer system is not being installed, it was announced from the office of the county manager last night.

The program calls for grading and resurfacing of 30 miles of roads at an estimated cost of $40,000.

Contracts for the surface treatment will be awarded by the county board early in August, it was announced.

The program includes surfacing of a number of roads which were graded last year but did not receive surface treatment.

Plans are being made to soon start work along many of the roads on which sewer construction has been completed.

Claude O. Thomas, secretary to the Arlington County Electoral Board, announced yesterday that "all judges of election at the Democratic primary to be held August 6 will be instructed to furnish a ballot to all persons regardless of color presenting themselves to vote providing that all other requirements have been complied with."

Thomas made the statement, he said, following a report of attempts to be made to bar colored persons from voting at the primary.

It was inadvertently reported yesterday morning that a mass meeting under auspices of the Cherrydale Citizens Association would be held last night, when candidates for the offices of sheriff and Commonwealth's attorney would speak. The meeting will be held tonight in the firemen's hall at 8 o'clock.

A joint meeting under auspices of the Jefferson and Arlington Ridge Civic Associations will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the Community Hall at Virginia Highlands. Candidates for the State Senate and the office of county clerk will speak.

The speakers will be John W. Rust, Hugh Reid and Landon C. Painter running for the State Senate, and Lyman M. Kelley, Ralph E. Remington, Chance Buchanan and C. B. Laycock, seeking to be county clerk.

Under leadership of Walter K. Handy, president of the Arlington County Council of Religious Education, plans are being made to launch a week-end religious education program in the county public schools.

The movement for week-day religious education in the county originated ten years ago in connection with the district and county conventions of the Arlington County School Association.

Application will be made to the county school board requesting that children, with consent and approval of their parents, may be excused from public school for religious instruction for one hour each week on a time schedule satisfactory to the school authorities.

The council will employ a trained teacher who will be in charge of all classes.

It is estimated that the total cost for the program this year, including Arlington's part of the budget of the State council, is $1,600.

A campaign to raise the necessary funds is now on in the county under direction of the Rev. Francis J. Lukens, vice president of the council. He is being assisted by Miss Priscilla Merrill, council treasurer.

The Business and Professional Woman's Club of Arlington held its monthly dinner last night at the George Mason Hotel at Alexandria.

Dr. Barklie Coulter, of Washington; Mrs. Joseph Boss and Dr. J. B. Jacobs spoke.

The program was in charge of the health committee, of which Mrs. Eva Mays Jacobs is chairman.

The Rev A. O. Henricks, evangelist from Sacramento, Calif., will preach at Park Lane camp meeting tonight at 8 o'clock. This is Dr. Henrick's second annual meeting at the camp. He will be assisted by Mrs. Henricks, as young people's leader, and by his son, Wendell, as song director and soloist.

Citing the passage of the heath hen and the passenger pigeon as examples of the extinction facing wild life that is not properly protected by man, the Rockville Chapter of the Izaak Walton League has announced a campaign of education designed to protect the rapidly vanishing game birds and other wild fowl of Maryland and particularly Montgomery County.

Dr. E. Russell Cook, Bethesda, chairman of the special committee on education said yesterday that the chief aim of the campaign is "to educate, train, condition and inject the necessary interest in wild life among public school students, farmers, 4-H Clubs, Boy Scouts, nature lovers and sportsmen."

The campaign will utilize lectures, short impromptu talks illustrated by motion pictures, and other phases of conservation. In addition, the importance of reforestation, soil erosion, water pollution and interrelated factors will be stressed.

Liggett's woman companion, Rosemary Butler, colored, of Washington, had been arrested by Montgomery County Policeman James Shoemaker on charges of operating without a permit. The policeman told Liggett to bring the car into the Bethesda Police Substation for the woman. As he pulled into the garage in the rear of the police station Liggett's car struck Policeman Shoemaker's private car, newly painted, scraping the paint from the rear fender and denting it. He was charged with reckless driving and joined his woman friend in jail.

Mayor to Aid Shirt Strikers In Alexandria

Women Gain Support as Firm Threatens to Move.

Mayor Davison asserted he would not tolerate outside interference with the women's efforts to accomplish their aims.

Secretary of the International Machinists' Union, Mayor Davison addressed the workers yesterday after a hair-pulling and scratching bout started when some of the strikers attacked a laborer who attempted to enter the building.

Alexandria police will be sent to their aid to enforce order if outsiders interfere with the processes of the strike, Mayor Davison warned.

"The relief rolls are open to you," Mayor Davison told the strikers.

"I would rather have you on relief than to submit to 'starvation wages,'" he added.

The strike involves about 95 women. It was called against a general 10 per cent cut in wages.

Responding to a statement that the strike may cause the plant to be removed from Alexandria, Mayor Davison said:

"If the factory will not pay decent wages, we will be glad to have it moved from the city."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Petersburg, Va., July 18.—Work on the development of the Petersburg airport, on Johnson road, is well under way. A crew of about 50 laborers is busy cutting weeds and grass to clear the tract.

July 1—You can make big savings if you buy your coal NOW. July prices are the lowest they have been in many, many years. Prices were cut to the bottom to make summer buying worth while.

Old timers in the hard coal region say that it is 15 to 18 years since hard coal prices at the mines have been so low. They also state that quality has been so much improved in recent years that the same price today buys far more heating value than in the old days.

Mine operators report that summer selling has been very successful. More users of fuel have shown their appreciation of 1935's low prices by buying their coal early. While prices at the mines increased June 1st and July 1st, it is still possible to make very considerable savings by buying now.

July 5—The news today is that prices of anthracite at the mines will advance on August 1st. Local prices are expected to go up soon. Wise buyers are filling their bins now.

Many people think that anthracite prices are rising because of political happenings. But that is not true. Low summer prices are offered to cut down the expense of keeping mines in working order during the time not much coal is being consumed. Water continually seeps into mines and pumps must be used all the time to keep the mines dry; extensive ventilating systems must operate continuously; other expenses go on.

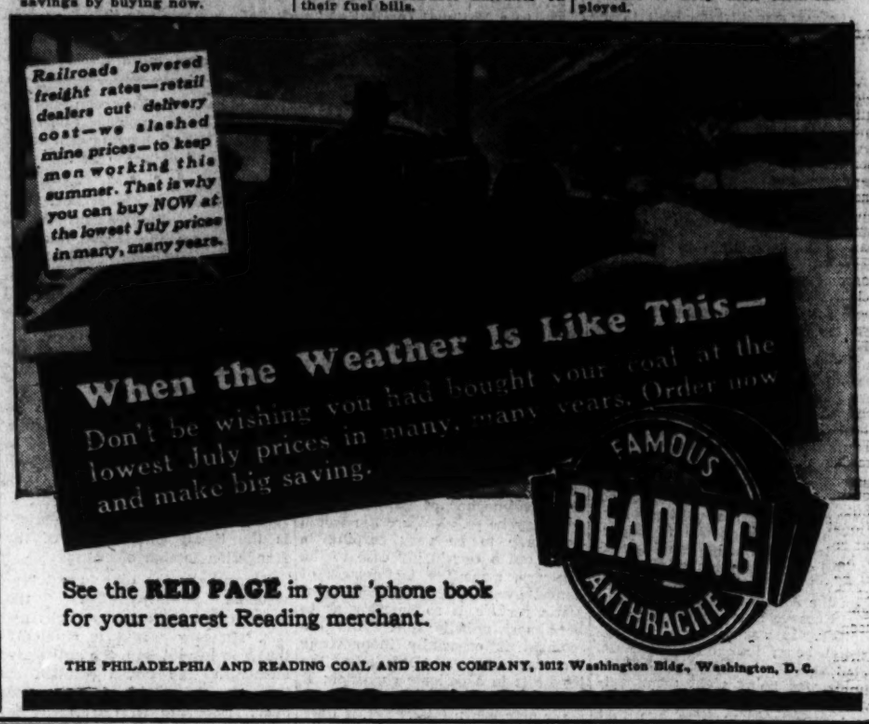
So hard coal prices are cut to the quick in order to have some return from necessary summer activities. This gives consumers a chance to save very desirable amounts on their fuel bills.

July 15—The facts are:

Famous Reading Anthracite is a wonderful buy at today's low prices. Super-cleaning removes all impurities and gives more heating value per ton.

In recent years early Spring and Summer buyers have made savings from 50c to $1.50 per ton on their investment in hard coal.

The actual amounts saved depend upon local delivery prices, which vary greatly, depending upon distance from the mines. Prices were lowered much more than usual in the spring of 1935 by the mining companies. Retail coal merchants are passing their savings along and also making drastic reductions in delivery costs in order to keep their men employed.



Railroads lowered freight rates—retail dealers cut delivery cost—we slashed mine prices—to keep men working this summer. That is why you can buy NOW at the lowest July prices in many, many years.
When the Weather Is Like This—
Don't be wishing you had bought your coal at the lowest July prices in many, many years. Order now and make big saving.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

A Boy Scout jamboree will be held tomorrow night at the Scout hall on the farm of Guilliaume Smoot, near McLean, Va.

All troops in Fairfax County have been invited to participate. The program will be directed by W. D. Adkins, troop committeman from Annandale, who has general charge of Scout work in the county this year.

This is the first of a series of programs which will continue until each troop has entertained the other troops. Appropriate games and contests have been arranged.

The jamboree will break up Sunday morning after breakfast. Plans for the event are under the direction of Theodore M. Coyner, scoutmaster, and Rutherford Sadtler, assistant scoutmaster.

The central troop committee is arranging to hold a guide training course to train 50 Fairfax County Scouts to assist the 30,000 visiting Scouts, who will attend the international jamboree in Washington next month. So far half the number has been selected. The course will be under the direction of District Commissioner Wheeler, with Eagle Scout Keep, of Herndon, as liaison officer.

Directors and officers have been elected by the stockholders of the Arlington Fairfax Building and Loan Association as follows: President, Dr. J. B. Gould; first vice president, E. T. Fenwick; second vice president, Frank H. Eastman; secretary, Neil Stevens; assistant secretary, Charles A. Stewart; treasurer, James H. Parmelee; attorneys, Harry R. Thomas and Frederick D. Richardson.

The treasurer's report showed assets of more than $445,000.

The annual anniversary celebration of the first battle of Bull Run will be held at 11 a. m. tomorow on the Bull Run Battlefield Park, near Manassas, Va.

Maj. John K. Shawvan, of Clyde, Ohio, will be the principal speaker, and will give an illustrated lecture on the two battles of Manassas, of which Bull Run is a part.

A special entertainment program and luncheon will be held in the grove about the Henry House, and a tour will be made of the battlefield where the Confederate forces were twice victorious in the War Between the States. The committee in charge of the celebration is headed by State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, president of the Battlefield Park Association.

Negro Given 4 Years In Car Death of Child

Richmond, Va., July 18 (AP).—William Norman Brown, 24-year-old Negro relief worker, was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary today for the killing of 6-year-old Elmer Dame, jr., on the Mechanicsville turnpike in 1933.

In a signed confession read to the court, Brown admitted his machine struck the child's tricycle. Brown said he and his companion placed the child in the car with the intention of carrying him to a hospital. Discovering that the child was dead, he said, he became panicky and with the aid of his companion placed the body in a gravel pit where it later was found.

Theater Man Is Freed On Sunday Law Charge

Roanoke, Va., July 18 (AP).—Sunday moving pictures gained a point here yesterday when a Hustings Court jury acquitted S. G. Richardson, moving picture theater manager, of a charge of violating the Sunday observance law. Richardson's case originated in a presentation of films on March 31. Fined in police court, he had appealed to the Hustings Court for a jury trial.

Defense counsel stressed the point that "some innocent form of amusement" was needed on Sunday and coupled the assertion with passage of the Sunday law making an exception of work of "necessity or charity." Other Sunday law cases, also appealed from police court, are expected to be dropped.

Prof. S. S. Steinberg, head of the department of civil engineering at the University of Maryland, has been named president of the newly organized educational division of the American Road Builders Association. Charles M. Upham, engineer-director of the association, announced the selection yesterday.

Prof. Steinberg pointed out that of the 160 engineering colleges in the United States and Canada, more than 100 have responded to a request of the new division by appointing faculty members to cooperate with the road builders.

The new division will function through these faculty representatives, appointed by the deans of the engineering colleges. The representatives will serve as contact men between the division and their institutions and its students in highway engineering.

Jury Summons Alexandria Boy In 'Fagin' Quiz

3 Other Doomed Youths Will Be Questioned in Clark Case.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 18.—An order was obtained today for the removal of four youths now in Sing-Sing death house to New York next Wednesday to testify in a grand jury investigation of Nelson B. Clark, once candidate for Governor and Congress in Massachusetts and characterized as mentor for a youth's crime gang.

One of the four who were sentenced to death for the killing last January of Patrolman James M. J. Killion is Newman Raymond, jr., of 119 East Belmont street, Alexandria, Va. The oldest is 21, the youngest 20.

The boys will be asked to tell the grand jury of their relationship with Clark, an elderly distinguished appearing man, and whatever they know of his activities.

Police charged at the time of the murder trial of the four that Clark acted as a "Fagin" for them, sending them out to commit crimes, caring for their guns, and disposing of the loot.

Clark is under an indeterminate sentence to the penitentiary for conviction of violating the Sullivan law prohibiting illegal possession of weapons.

Police Seeking Name Of Accident Victim

Pennington Gap, Va., July 18 (AP). Authorities sought unsuccessfully today to identify a man whose body has lain in a morgue here since Monday. The night of July 3 a man who said he was Charles Richards, of Gremsley, Tenn., brought the injured man to a hospital and said he had struck him with his automobile.

Richards has not been seen since. The injured man said he was H. L. Frank, of Middlesboro, Ky., but investigation proved this false. He died from a skull fracture. He is described as having brown hair, weighing 177 pounds, 5 feet 10 inches tall, and having scars on his head and abdomen, one evidently from an appendectomy and the other possibly a bullet wound. He wore a brown suit and carried a bag.

Refreshments Stolen.

Leonardtown, Md., July 18.—While 25 guests danced at a party given at the home of Archie Wood near Hollywood, thieves stole the refreshments, which included a 5-gallon freezer of ice cream.

Hollywood

Hollywood, July 18.

WHEN Grace Moore in "Love Me Forever" begins to sing in the "La Boheme" sequence, writes R. M. Wickham, she has a shawl over her shoulders, and during the first part of the song, Miss Moore, very obviously, lets it fall to the floor. Then comes a long shot of Miss Moore and she is still without the shawl, but in the very next shot she again has the shawl over her shoulders. This off-again, on-again shawl continues, for in the next long shot the shawl is missing. Yet, during all this time, Miss Moore hasn't budged from her position. She is never seen picking up the shawl; yet in the long shots the shawl is not evident and in the close-ups she is wearing it.

This is not a magic shawl. The close-ups were probably made one day and the long shots another, and the script girl didn't check Grace Moore's wardrobe very carefully.

George Raft in "The Glass Key" is dunked in a bath tub. He is fully attired and there is water in the bathtub. Then, according to Jean Jacobsen, Raft is put into a bed. His clothes are soaking wet.

A few minutes later, when Raft falls out of the bed, his clothes are dry—and that isn't all. There is a neat crease in the trousers.

Never let it be said of George Raft that he isn't always the well-dressed man.

THE cameraman depicted in "Front Page Woman" comes in for criticism from Gus Gerlack, who says he is a genuine cameraman and has been shooting news pictures with a speed graphic. Gus is very annoyed with "Toots," the cameraman in this flicker, because "Toots" always got his picture in spite of the fact that he made each and every shot without even putting a plate holder in his camera.

Going to a vitaphone short to find a flicker flaw, Sol Fleischman is very amused by "Why Pay Rent," featuring Roscoe Ates—that is, he is very amused with the movie boner.

In the opening sequence a door bell rings. The door opens and there is a Postal Telegraph messenger in a bright Postal uniform. What is he delivering? A telegram, of course. He gives the telegram to Ates. There is a close-up of the telegram and it is plainly seen that it is a Western Union telegram.

Pat O'Brien in "Oil for the Lamps of China," writes Jane Fournier, hears the sound of horses' hoofs and goes to the window. Outside the snow is nice and deep. Yet, one must have sound effects, what?

Charles Ruggles in "No More Ladies" appears at the station to go to the country with no other baggage than a toothbrush. Yet, in the following scenes, insists Harold Matthews, Ruggles appears in sport clothes, a business suit—not the one he was wearing—and dinner clothes.

It must be nice to have friends who keep a wardrobe ready for you.

THE orchestra in a sequence of "Break of Hearts" is waiting for Charles Boyer, as conductor, to arrive for a rehearsal, writes M. Kahn. Various members of the orchestra comment on Boyer's tardiness. Yet, when the orchestra is again shown on the screen during the rehearsal, not one of the men who spoke about the delay can be seen.

It is evident from this that one group of actors was employed to play the members of the orchestra for the speaking roles and another group was hired to look like an orchestra playing.

In "Murder in the Fleet," claims Ilean Meyer, the shadow of the murderer is seen many times, and from the form of the shadow it is evident that it is a thin person, yet when the murderer is discovered he is shown to be fat and heavy. It must be that Metro used "the thin man" just to play the shadow.

Madge Evans visits Paul Lukas at his winter resort in "The Age of Indiscretion." Shortly afterwards, claims Sol Savern, Miss Evans retires. The following morning she is wearing pajamas and a robe. Mr. Savern wants to know how she knew where her room was and where she obtained the pajamas and the robe. They couldn't belong to Paul Lukas for he is much bigger than Miss Evans and the outfit was just perfect for her.

Don't you know, Mr. Savern, that all movie heroes always have pajamas or a nightie just for a sudden visit by the heroine, which they are always expecting?

Gas Dealer Wins 9th Court Victory

Danville Fight Seen Ended by Decision.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., July 18.—The American flag flew this evening over Peter S. Ford's beleaguered filling station in North Danville, the focal point of a long controversy between himself and the city on the subject of putting filling stations in the residential district. It flew there after he had scored his ninth court victory at Chatham and one which Ford appeared to believe removed the last obstacle to selling gasoline.

Judge Turner Clement dismissed an injunction bill secured by the city. He said he had no power to grant an appeal nor could he extend the period of injunctive relief, although the city council asked him to do so.

Ford then volunteered not to break the side walk or to build a driveway to his filling station until the city has had the opportunity to perfect an appeal to the Supreme Court on the issue of the validity of the city's building ordinance, which is a twin issue, the city being anxious to avail this vehicle to secure an opinion from the high court.

"FOR 9,220 MILES MY NEW DODGE HAS AVERAGED 21¼ MILES PER GALLON"

J. L. MEAGHER
of VALPARAISO, INDIANA

"... and it has saved me about 20¢ on every dollar's worth of oil."

EVERY day tens of thousands of Dodge owners drive millions of money-saving miles. And week after week—month after month—they continue to get gas and oil mileage that has always been considered impossible. They write in to the factory and tell their friends at home that they are getting 18-20-22 and even more miles per gallon.

This remarkable low cost of operation is not the experience of one or two drivers . . . it's not luck, or the efficient operation of a few outstanding engines. This astounding economy has been deliberately engineered into the new Dodge. The powerful Dodge "Red Ram" engine has a combination of economy features that save you money every mile you drive. And Dodge owners say that these consistent gas, oil and upkeep savings soon make up the difference in price between the big, comfortable Dodge and small, lowest-priced, competitive cars.

Out-of-Door Dining Spots Lure Society

Official, Diplomatic Sets Mingle on Terrace of the Shoreham.

Mrs. Vidal, Miss Bradley, Mrs. Pritchett Among Others Noted.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society is well versed in the art of al fresco dining, and Washington offers numerous delightful places where those who remain in town may dine and dance on fine evenings and forget the heat of the day.

The Shoreham Terrace is one of the most pleasant spots in town. There one finds diplomats, statesmen and smart society gathered to watch the floor show, dance and have their dinner every night.

The other night there was a particularly interesting gathering on the terrace, all visiting at the various tables during intermissions in the dancing. Mrs. Nina Gore Vidal was there with Mr. George Marshall and several out-of-town guests. Mrs. Vidal, recently returned to the Capital from Reno, Nev., has a sun bronze which was set off by a gown of deep rose satin, with which she wore a long double strand of uncut amber, with earrings to match. Nearby were Mr. Moran McConihe with Miss Mary Parrish Bradel, the latter in a sports frock of beige linen with a sailor collar braided in brown.

At a large table were Mrs. Campbell Pritchett in a flower chiffon dinner frock, with Mr. and Mrs. Emmons Smith and Mr. Frank Packard. Mrs. Smith is in town for several days from Rehoboth Beach, Del., where she is spending the summer, and, with Mr. Smith, will return to the resort today. She wore a printed chiffon dinner frock in shades of rose and green on a white background.

In another group was Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, with several friends. Near his table were Mr. W. Forbes Morgan with Col. James H. Hayes and Mr. Boris Said, of New York. All three left early to take the midnight train to New York. Col. Hayes will sail August 2 on the Europa for a two months' stay in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell, of New York, who are spending the summer at the Shorcham, were there, the latter wearing a crepe frock of gray, printed with tiny yellow owls, and a large leghorn hat. Mrs. Powell is the former Miss Louise Conkey, niece of Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill.

Gen. Rupert Blue was there with Mme. Sanchez-Latour, the latter in a white frock with a becoming red hat and jacket, and nearby was Senorita Elena Calderon in white, trimmed with bands of black, and a large hat to match.

Others seen were Mr. George Shea, Dr. James Emery and Mr. Charles Owen, of New York.

Capital Society Joins Nearby Summer Colonies

By John Q. Alexander.

WE DON'T LIKE to keep harping on the heat, but like the poor it's always with us, and something must be done about it. Personally, we believe it's not the heat but the stupidity which makes men suffer in warm weather. If they would cast an eye about, they would discover wearing apparel as light and airy as a day dream and twice as practical.

To begin with, some genius of the manufacturing world has invented a fabric called Bombay, which will keep you cool and cost you just $27.50 all made up into a nifty suit. Elegantly tailored, these are available in bangkok (light sand color) and white, and should be dry-cleaned, not washed. Just looking at them makes you think of icebergs, polar bears and Admiral Byrd.

Another good suiting is seersucker, which has come back into its own after years in the sartorial dog house. Reason for this is that new weaves and designs have been created and the makers have learned to tailor it correctly. We saw some exceptionally good ones in small checks, black or brown, beautifully put tgether, for $14.

OUR TIRELESS pursuit of the summer dress shirt has ended at last. We've tracked down a white shirt with lay-down attached collar, pleated bosom and mesh back that is swell for evening wear. The collar and bosom look crisp, but in reality are soft as goofer feathers—you don't use any starch in this shirt. It's more comfortable than an ordinary shirt and better looking with a mess jacket, white coat and dark trousers, or any combination of black and white for after dark. It costs $3, and is guaranteed not to wilt.

If you're hot under the collar, look at the amazing assortment of ties we saw yesterday. Summer ties of all deschiptions, in gingham, homespun weaves, poplins, seersuckers and cotton crepes. This store has sold 10,000 of them already and if you don't have some soon you'll be as alone as Greta Garbo and not half so handsome. They wash well, and washing's cheaper than dry-cleaning. Not a dub in a carload, which you should buy at the present special sale price of 35 cents each, three for $1.

If you've been driving much lately, you've probably noticed that no matter where you go or when, the sun is always right in front of you, blinding you, irritating you and in general making your life miserable. And if you wear spectacles you're in difficulties because who wants to wear spectacles and sun goggles at the same time? But now you can get sun glasses that clip snugly onto your regular glasses, taking the sunshine out of your eyes and putting it into your disposition. These priceless gadgets cost 50 cents.

SPEAKING of pajamas, which we were last week, we have come across still another kind to help you endure the temperature. The manufacturers, with a determination we admire very much, have constructed the coolest pair of pajamas they could imagine and then, with rare acumen, snipped off the arms above the elbow and the legs above the knee. They are of sheer cotton, slip-over style, without a collar to irk you. Come to think of it, what is the use of long pants and sleeves? Pity some one didn't think of it before. These are $2 a pair, and if they don't bring cucumber slumber it's your nerves and not the heat that's keeping you awake nights.

This outfitter is boasting also about a new flannel sports shirt, and we must admit his enthusiasm is justified. It's not a polo shirt, having long sleeves and tails to tuck in. The big feature is the collar, which is deep and widespread and will set beautifully on your manly neck. Four buttons allow ample opening at throat and chest. Flannel is better than cotton for strenuous activity, since it is absorbent, won't stick to you and is virtually wrinkle-proof. Walter Hagen and others who should know have taken this up in a big way. Comes in Wedgwood blue, dark blue and white. You can play 18 holes in this and come through looking fresh and unsullied, which shows you how good it is. $8.50 each.

DID YOU KNOW that you can get a light-weight felt hat for summer wear that weighs just two ounces? That's much lighter than your straw hat, and felt is much more comfortable. (Show us a straw hat that's comfortable and we'll be terribly surprised.) The crown is ventilated so that the breeze, if any, can come sweeping through to cool your fevered brow. It's particularly useful for vacation wear since you can roll it up and pack it in a space less than that required for a cap, even, and dig it out later still as smooth and smart as smooth and smart can be. $5.00, available in several colors.

If you're as weary as we are of trying to keep your sneakers clean, you'll give three or even four cheers for the new navy blue tennis shoes. They are of canvas, have a thick white sole of raw rubber, and boast a shock-proof inner sole and an arch and heel cushion. Very smart, and fine for all kinds of knock-about pastimes. They don't need cleaning very often, but when they do, you just give them a casual scrubbing with water. $1.50 a pair.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Her Position Eliminated by Efficiency Expert in 1933, Woman of 36 Has Since Been Without Regular Employment; She Seeks Counsel.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have, for weeks, been reading your column in The Post. And because your advice is sincere and practical, rather than theoretical, and because you have helped others I am bringing my problem to you.

To make a long story as short as possible, I seem to be one of those "square pegs in a round hole," or vice versa. It seems that all my life has been an unfortunate battle against iron-handed fate. My father died when I was 5 years old, leaving myself and a sister three younger to be raised by a delicate mother and—nothing on which to raise us.

• • • •

But, somehow, she did it. I am a college graduate, also a graduate from business college and have had better than ten years' actual experience in secretarial and general office work.

But I am getting ahead of myself. In 1918, when the world was embroiled in the last great war, when Washington was the rendezvous of foreign diplomat and statesman, when the American doughboy, the British tommy and the French poilou made the streets of Washington colorful, I was a young stenographer in the Postoffice Department.

• • • •

Like many others, I met, loved and married a soldier boy from Camp Meigs. Like many another of those wartime romances, it went away. A few years later I was forced to leave him because he had degenerated into a moron. Our little son was then 3 years of age, and since then I have worked and reared him, keeping him in good company, well clothed and fed. He now has two more years of high school. I had hoped that somehow he might acquire a college education. But unless things change I'm afraid he won't be able to complete those last two years of high school.

• • • •

In 1933 I was employed as secretary and assistant in a branch office of a nationally known welfare association whose headquarters are in Washington. But they installed an efficiency expert who began cutting down expenses. And, as is usually the case, instead of slicing $10 a month from the $10,000-a-year figurehead directors (which would have totaled a greater savings than my $100 a month) he abolished my position altogether, throwing me out.

• • • •

I'm 36 yars old, although I doubtless look older, and no one seems to want a woman who is past the "flapper" age, no matter how capable, experienced or conscientious she may be. I'm not ugly. In fact, have been considered a pretty woman. I am naturally reserved and quiet—the studious type who places her work first, attends faithfully to it and has found more solace and comfort in books than in mere idle chatter or gossip. Not that I don't like people. I do, and the few friends I have are loyal. But I'm afraid I'm losing my grip or developing an inferiority complex.

• • • •

I keep telling myself: "You are worth while. You are capable. Somewhere there is a secretarial or even a stenographic position for you. Hold on a little longer and it will come to you."

But, Miss Haworth, am I right, or am I just, deluding myself into thinking that some day I'll have another good position and can hold up my head and feel that I'm an individual once more?

• • • •

I have lost my mother. My brother-in-law, with whom I have been living, is ill, and I am at my wit's end. Since school closed Sonny has been working at the only job he could find, for $2.50 per week, not enough to pay his board.

• • • •

His father did his "bit" the same as other soldiers in the war, but because he was not killed in service or has not since died, I am not eligible for preference in Government work. And, as stated, men seem to want only "flappers."

Please, Miss Haworth, help me if you can. I shall eagerly watch your column and shall be only too glad to give you my name and address if you can help me.

R. E. M.

About Job-Hunting.

DEAR R. E. M.: When a woman of your capabilities, education and experience fails to find a job, I am inclined to think it's because she is making a faulty approach to the task of finding one.

Looking for a job is a real, full-time job in itself; one which must be handled in a business-like, efficient, organized way.

• • • •

It follows, therefore, that you now have an actual job in your lap to be done. Was it your experience in the past that you mastered a job by telling yourself: "I am worth while. I am capable?" I think not. You mastered it by rolling up your sleeves, figuratively speaking; forgetting all about yourself, and tackling the work to be done.

• • • •

It takes a great deal more than "holding on" to get a job. Only in instances so rare as to be almost nonexistent does a job "come" to an unemployed person. It's up to you to go after the job. You're wasting time and energy mulling over the past; dramatizing yourself as the persecuted victim of an "iron-handed fate."

Do you get eight to ten hours sleep each night? Do you sally forth at a regular hour each morning, immaculately groomed, to track down every possible clue your imagination (intelligently queried) has suggested to you as leading to a job? Do you make each contact lead to another contact in a tireless, adventurous quest? Do you approach a prospective employer with an apologetic "Yes, I know I'm 36 and look older" attitude; an "I know you want a younger woman, but, after all, I can be useful if you'll give me a chance" feeling shadowing your face? Or do you approach him (or her) with a buoyant confidence in your abilities irradiating your whole being and shining forth in a pleasantly convincing sales talk?

• • • •

The average employer needs employes who can not only handle work efficiently but who can make an instantaneously pleasing impression upon the public whom he must, for business reasons, please. When you fail in the first few minutes of meeting to impress a prospective employer with the fact that you are not only a capable workman, but a pleasing person to know, then it is only natural for him to assume that you have little to sell that he needs to buy.

• • • •

Try to reorganize your thinking along more healthful, less self-pitying, less self-dramatizing, lines. What you construe to be the machinations of an "iron-handed fate" are nothing more than inescapable reverses of fortune encountered by every human being along life's pathway.

What men dislike intensely in women is a delicate suggestion of martydom heroically endured. Your conviction of your own undesirability as a woman past the flapper age is bound to react to your own disadvantage; so is your feeling that the great charitable organization failed to do right by you. If you were convinced your ejection was their loss, and not yours, you might rebound the more quickly into an even better job. A well-known columnist, who lost dozens of jobs before he finally landed in the top bracket income class, once wrote out of his own experience: "I have never known a person who lost a job through fortuitous circumstance who didn't find a better one."

• • • •

If men employers seem to prefer young girl employes (which I don't altogether agree with; which is, in most instances, only a self-excusatory generality) it is probably because they feel an involuntary admiration and respect for the capable self-confidence of youth, and not, as too many unsure older women are inclined to believe, because of a taint of libidinousness in their make-up.

• • • •

In conclusion, I will say this: I know of an opening for you. If you will send me your name and address, or telephone me at NAtional 4200, Branch 343, I will give you the name of a person who has agreed to give you a try-out in a job.

French Cooks Plan Tribute to Patron Saint

TARASCON, France, July 18.—Hundreds of cooks, both men and women, will invade and "occupy" the town of Tarascon on July 29 in tribute to St. Martha, the patron saint of kitchen workers.

Forgetting beef steak, fried potatoes and French pastry, these cooks will direct their meditations to St. Martha, and they will pray before the beautiful marble tomb in St. Martha's Church.

It will be news to most persons to learn that Saint Martha, hostess of Christ at Bethany and sister of Lazarus who was raised from the dead, is buried in Tarascon. And yet, such is the fact, if century-old traditions, firmly believed in Provence, are accepted at their face value. At any rate, St. Martha's shrine attracts thousands of pilgrims—and they are not all cooks—every year.

St. John (11:2) refers to this saint as follows, "It was this Martha which anointed the Lord with ointment and wiped his feet with her hair." After the death of Jesus, according to Provencal legends, Martha came to Marseille with her brother Lazarus and her sister Mary to evangelize the Mediterranean coast. Her greatest exploit was in Tarascon where she slew "La Tarasque," a prehistoric monster who had been terrorizing the countryside.

As a result of all this, Tarascon has become St. Martha's private bailiwick and due to the enthusiasm of French cooks and kitchen workers, it has been transformed into a quaint, if diminutive pilgrimage center.

Birth Rate Rise Held A Sign of Recovery

The rise in the birth rate indicates an upward turn in the economic tide, according to Dr. Louis L. Dublin, statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Dr. Dublin said there was a 3 per cent increase in the birth rate in New York in 1934 over 1933—a rate of 17 per 1,000 of population compared with 16.6. The birth rate in 1928, the last full year of prosperity, was 19.8 per 1,000 of population.

If Women Insist on Drinking, They Should Evolve a Code Recognizing Their Limitations

By Malvina Lindsay.

THE MOST important repeal problem facing women, it seems, is not what wine to serve with roast duck or where to get a good beer recipe for cornbread, but how to drink like gentlemen. Women just can't take it when it comes to drinking, say bartenders, and for that reason feminism is now facing two attacks on the alcoholic front.

• • • •

One is at St. Louis, where the excise commissioner has asked a law forbidding the sale of liquor to women in bars. Saloonkeepers of the city, who strongly favor the law, complain that women are a menace to business because they mooch drinks off men customers.

• • • •

The other attack comes from the New York Bartenders Association, which will ask the American Federation of Labor at its convention in August in Detroit to approve a bill eliminating barmaids and prohibiting women from standing at the bar. The New York bartenders say women customers get too troublesome when they become intoxicated and that barmaids take too many drinks with the men customers.

THE BARTENDERS' complaint that the poor, defenseless men customers are exploited by women moochers at bars seems far-fetched. When was a man ever mooched who didn't want to be mooched? And if he's the easy-mooch type, he might as well be induced to buy drinks as silk stockings, perfume or fur coats. Moreover, he migt as well buy drinks for women as for men customers. When did a man ever come home from a purely masculine bar without having bought several rounds of drinks for Tom, Bill and George, to say nothing of at least one fascinating "strange gentleman" with whom he had struck up a lifetime friendship?

However, the charge that women are troublesome at bars may have a little more justification. At least it draws attention to the fact that women today, if they are going to drink at all, have even a greater need of a drinking code than men.

• • • •

It is no treachery to feminism to say that ladies in their cups are far more unesthetic sights than men and far greater nuisances. For one thing, their clothes and hair get more messy. For another, their laugh is louder and even sillier. For still another, they abuse their feminine prerogatives. A man drunk may be slapped down or kicked out. But not a woman. In fact, the more intoxicated she becomes, the more insistent she is that she is a lady and must be treated as such.

THE FACT that men do not observe their own drinking code has nothing to do with its value. Women would do well to prove again that here is another field they can take over and develop better than the original owners.

• • • •

The world may no longer expect women to contribute moral or even ethical values to life, but it does expect them to contribute esthetic ones. That they themselves recognize this obligation is attested by the success of cosmetic shops and fashion salons. The one distinction remain to woman is beauty, or better still the suggestion of beauty, and she would seem a vainglorious Esau to sell this birthright for the price of an additional highball.

• • • •

A code for women drinkers needs only two provisions. First, that the drinker find out how much she can stand and stop at the danger line. Second, if she can't find out or she can't stop, then not to begin. Or if she must drink, let her do it in boudoir.

When women first became active in public life, smart young men were won't to remark loudly of feminine orators who became boresome or termagent, "Why do such women leave home?" In these modern days, the remark might well be applied to women drinkers who do not know when they have had enough.

Augustine Daly Credits Career To an Accident

By Hope Ridings Miller.

KNOWN to the world of journalism as an editorial writer, a reviewer and a columnist to audiences throughout the East as a delightful speaker and to verse lovers everywhere for his half-humorous, half-pathetic interpretations of Italian and Irish immigrants—Thomas Augustine Daly regards what success he has attained as "merely an accident."

The guest of Dr. Homer C. House, head of the English department at the University of Maryland, he had come to College Park to talk on "Salubrities I Have Met"—and to read some of his poems for which there have been numerous requests ever since he lectured at the university a year ago.

An hour before he was to speak Wednesday evening, he sat in the garden of Dr. House's home and confessed it was merely an accident that he left Fordham University at the end of his sophomore year to become a newspaper man; that he began writing verse in half a dozen dialects (as well as "straight" English); that he has a number of successful books to his credit, and that he now conducts a column published three times a week in a Philadelphia newspaper.

Gains 15 Pounds in Year.

Of medium height, with blue eyes and dark hair, now thinning on top, Mr. Daly mentioned he "was 15 pounds heavier than this time last year, and most of my weight," he went on, "is concentrated in this German goiter. (He placed his hand on that region commonly designated a bay window.) But what else shall we talk about? Verse?"

Verse it would be. Particularly his verse, if he didn't mind. How, for example, did he ever come to write in Italian dialect?

That, he said, was a long story, with a beginning that went back 31 years when he attended the second meeting of the American Press Humorists in St. Louis. "At that time I had been married about five years," he explained, "and hadn't been out much at night or done much talking in all that time.

"But the meeting was a gay affair—something like an undertakers' convention in that no business was done, but there was lots of fun. Before I knew it I had to make a speech; and soon found myself telling an Italian baseball story as related by one of the survivors. It was a sure-fire gag, and went over with a bang, with the result my friends flattered me by requesting and insisting on something else with an Italian flavor. I protested I didn't know any more stories. 'Then you'll have to write one,' they said. So more from necessity than inspiration I turned out my first piece of Italian dialect verse. I've been at it, off and on, ever since."

Irish Dialect Came Easier.

Thus was explained the origin of Angela, Carlotta, Guiseppe—"da barber," and countless other Italian characters whose foibles Mr. Daly has exhibited in verse.

His name probably explains why the Irish dialect poems came easier. His Irish heritage also might explain his love for the whimsical as well as the humorous, his reverence for sublime poetry and his distaste for that hybrid of poetry and prose—free verse.

While most of his best-known work has been in a light vein, Mr. Daly admitted he was a comedian who had always wanted to play Hamlet. Yet he has written some serious poetry, with success. One of these, "Ode to a Thrush," in fact, won a prize over Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Renascence."

"That was one of the biggest accidents of all," Mr. Daly said. "'Renascence' certainly should have been the award. That's the trouble with contests. The best poem rarely wins."

Pays Robinson Tribute.

He commented favorably on Miss Millay's poems, as well as the work of Robert Frost and Alice Meynell. He believes that probably the greatest poet in modern times was Edwin Arlington Robinson, "a true genius, although many of his lines were carved on cherry stones for only a few people to read and enjoy."

Who, of living poets, was his favorite? This question had obviously been asked before. So many times, he said, he had written a whole poem to answer it—a poem ending in this quatrain:

"My favorite poet? I'll rejoice
And tread this old earth gaily
As long as I can hear the voice Of T. A. Daly."

America's Famous Woman Is Likely To Be Unwed, 45, and College Trained

MRS. NELLIE TAYLOE ROSS.

EVANGELINE BOOTH.

MRS. GRACE MORRISON POOLE.

If Married, She Usually Has One Child, New Book Reveals.

THE FAMOUS WOMAN in America today is likely to be unmarried. If she is married, she probably has either one child or none. She is most likely to be 45, college trained, and either a writer or a teacher.

These facts were brought to light by a recently published book, "American Women," which contains the biographies of 6,214 selected for earned fame. Sub-titled "The Official Who's Who Among the Women of the Nation," this volume also shows the female of the species doesn't tell everything she knows. Of the women listed, more than a third declined to reveal their age, 1,852 did not indicate political preference, and 1,171 did not state religion.

Age Range Is 21 to 93.

But the women included were not reticent about telling anything else. Each biography gives present and previous occupation, marriages, children, hobbies, recreations and home address of the woman in question.

Fifty-nine per cent of the number were unmarried. The majority of those married have at most only one child. Only one woman in the whole book had as many as ten children.

In the largest number of cases those frank enough to give their birth year were born between 1885 and 1896. The age range was 21 to 93.

Eighty-two per cent of the number went to college, 78 per cent received degrees and 713 of the 5,079 college women won Phi Beta Kappa. Canada and England contributed most of the 448 women born in foreign countries.

Occupations with the largest number of women represented were writing, teaching, business, librarianship and editing. Women listed their hobbies in the following order of preference: Gardening, music, travel, reading, home and family and books. Among unusual hobbies listed were carpentry, collecting elephants, ancient swords and dolls, transcribing Braille and copying old epitaphs. Favorite sports and recreations were walking, swimming, horseback riding, motoring, travel, golf, reading and tennis.

In addition to the biographies the book contains brief messages on the progress of women from Katharine F. Lenroot, Nellie Tayloe Ross, Grace Morrison Poole, Faith Baldwin, Carrie Jacobs Bond, Evangeline Booth, Rose M. Knox and Lillian D. Wald. There is also a geographical cross-index, furnishing easily accessible name and occupational reference by city and State. This shows the greatest number of famous women—1,096 to be exact—now live in New York. The District of Columbia comes next with 365, and Chicago is third with 252.

Applications Are Listed.

An organization appendix has a list of national women's organizations and other organizations with which women are prominently identified, also names of officers and a brief statement of the organization's purpose.

Six by nine inches in size, the book contains 750 pages and is handsomely bound. Published under the direction of Merle Armitage (nationally-known impresario, business manager of many celebrities, and the author of eight books), the volume was edited by Durward Howes, who also edited "America's Young Men."

What TODAY Means

"Cancer."

IF JULY 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. until noon, from 1 to 3 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 9 to 11 p. m.

There may be danger in talking too freely on this day. Remarks made at random can cause a great deal of trouble, so be careful how you express yourself. Misunderstandings regarding terms on which business transactions may be predicated, are likely to occur, unless due precaution is used during the negotiations. Time, place or environment are likely to play an important part in the success, or failure, of social activities this day.

If a woman, and July 19 is your birthday, you have probably a remarkable amount of vitality. Full of "pep and ginger," you set your friends a pace they may find it hard to match when you once make up your mind to do things or go places.

Possessing original ideas you may do best in some line of work where you will have creative opportunities such as sculptoring, designing, painting, composing, writing, interior decorating or window-dressing.

If a man and July 19 is your natal day, you may have a contradictory nature; be extremely practical, but also artistic. Bluntly outspoken, but possessing a poetic imagination, kindly considerate to the deserving, but no patience for the undeserving. Writing, chemistry, merchandising, teaching, engineering or scientific research might be among the activities that will win you an enviable reputation.

Indispensable Cleaner Found For a Journey

Set of 3 Liquids and Powder Removes Any Spot or Stain.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

HERE'S good news for all those who fuss and fume over spots and stains on their favorite clothing or table linen. We've discovered a cleaner which, all by itself, literally takes out any spot which a dry cleaning establishment can remove! The important feature of this cleaner, which makes it different from most others on the market, is that it comes in a set of three separate liquids, plus a powder. One liquid removes spots caused by perspiration and alcoholic drinks, another does away with wax, tar and paint, and the third is death on berry, tea and coffee stains. The powder is used with all three, and by itself, is excellent for cleaning hats. This cleaner leaves no ring, and dries instantly—that is why it is ideal to take along on a trip. Just one set to carry on the journey, and no need to worry about arriving at one's destination looking as though one had changed several tires en route. The liquid which removes berry, tea and coffee stains should be helpful with respect to table linens, and all three mixtures can be used effectively on laces, chiffons and other fragile materials. We became so convinced of its magical powers after watching a demonstration of its wonder-working qualities on a bit of grease-stained cloth that we walked off with a package ourselves. It comes in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.

Underwear for Bathing Suits.

IF YOU are one of many who feel that their figure is not at its best in a bathing suit, draw a breath of relief and be prepared to forget your worries on this score. No more bulging stomachs or sagging muscles from now on, because somebody has invented underwear for bathing suits! This underwear is one piece, and carefully cut to fit tight under your suit. Substantial and solid without being cumbersome, it comes in an attractive shade of pastel pink, and has black dots scattered here and there. It's so light and airy that you will never even know you have it on. But your friends will notice the difference in your appearance immediately. Your figure will have the firm form and outline of that of a young girl, instead of being soft and flabby. In addition, you can become slim while you swim, for this undergarment is made of exactly the same kind of rubber which goes into reducing girdles. It will do wonders in taking off pounds while you are swimming around and enjoying yourself. At the end of the summer you should be a sylph with this outfit, without having gone to all the trouble of dieting or strenuous exercising. And there's not the slightest doubt about it—the new rubber underwear will add infinitely to your chic appearance. It costs only $1.50.

Rejuvenating Cream.

IT'S a secret preparation, this wonderful rejuvenating cream we discovered in a downtown department store the other day. Nobody knows what's in it, except the famous skin specialist who mixed it, and he's not telling. We don't blame him for guarding his secret, though, for this cream works wonders on your face, and has a far greater value than its reasonable price would indicate. It tones up the tissues, clarifies the pores and gives your face that fresh dewy look so seldom found under the stress and strain of modern indoor life. By improving the circulation process, it brings a pink glow to your face. Put it on after you come home tired and worn out, leave it on for a few hours and you will be amazed at the difference in your skin. It'll smooth away those tired wrinkles and take away those weary lines. You'll be a different creature from the wilted, sticky looking person who left the office a few hours before. Nobody likes to mess around with gummy creams in the hot weather, but the advantage of this particular one is that a very little bit goes a long way. Just a pat and a rub here and there will be sufficient. It costs $3.50 and is worth every bit of it.

Halter and Bag Sets.

THE BETTER matched the various parts, of one's dress, the smarter the ensemble. Everywhere one goes, one sees smart women wearing matching gloves and hats, scarfs and belts.

Those who still have vacations to look forward to should go down to a local department store and take a look at the novel combination halter and bag sets they have on sale. This is a season for sets.

Both the bag and the halter in this beach set are made of the same materials, and what material! Luscious Tahitian combinations of great splashy flowers in red, yellow, black and white and gay patterns of polka dots will be most effective against a background of sea and sky. The bag is rubber lined, and just the thing in which to carry your knitting or your cosmetics down to the beach. And, believe it or not, the whole outfit costs only 89 cents.

Baked Onions Stuffed With Filberts Makes a Tasteful Vegetable Plate

Burmuda or Spanish onion cups filled with soft, well-seasoned bread crumbs and chopped Brazil nuts form the piece de resistance for an excellent vegetable dinner. Ideal accompaniments are found in the sliced tomatoes nested in lettuce cups and buttered green beans.

Nuts Also Supply Needed Fats, Proteids for Meatless Meal.

By Dorothea Duncan.

VEGETABLE platter dinners have much in their favor. They are economical, pleasing and easily served and offer every requirement for a well-balanced meal. Of course, a vegetable platter must be wisely planned. The vegetables themselves must complement each other both in nutritional qualities, flavors and colors, and one of them should be prepared as to form the piece de resistance to take the place of the heartier meat product.

Melted cheese atop a fluffy baked potato, cheese sauce or hollandaise are the most unusual methods of introducing protein and fat into the vegetable meal. Poached eggs are often used, too, as a hub from which the vegetables radiate.

Nuts also supply both protein and fats if they are rightly chosen, and enrich the vegetable platter wonderfully, particularly if they are Brazil nuts, which combine deliciously with many vegetables.

Taste Will Allay Doubts.

For your next vegetable platter serve onions with Brazil nut stuffing. Like so many new combinations this one sounds a little doubtful, but after you have tried it you will agree that it makes a very pleasing and satisfying dish for a vegetable platter.

Select mild-flavored white onions, Bermuda or Spanish preferred, and not too large. Cook in boiling salted water till partially tender, then drain and remove the center pulp, keeping the outside intact. Chop the pulp and add twice its quantity of chopped Brazil nuts, and soft bread crumbs. Season with salt, pepper, paprika and bits of butter. Fill the onions and top each with a whole Brazil nut meat wrapped in a bit of bacon. Bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven (350° F.). With the onions, serve a baked potato, string beans, sliced tomatoes in a cup of lettuce leaves, and any preferred pickle or relish.

Here, too, is a particularly appealing way to prepare spinach for the vegetable platter. Wash well and cook in as little water as possible ¼ to ½ peck of spinach—drain thoroughly and chop very fine. Place in a skillet with 1 to 2 tablespoons of butter or other fat, and 4 tablespoons of chopped Brazil nuts. Stir over the fire while the butter melts and the nuts brown slightly, then add 1 to 2 tablespoons of flour and continue stirring until well mixed and bubbling. Pour in slowly 1 cup of milk and simmer until nicely thickened. Fried tomatoes, buttered carrots, lima beans and cole slaw combine excellently with the spinach.

Suggestion in Squash.

Leftover yellow summer squash may be transformed into a delectable dish to form the piece de resistance of a vegetable meal. Take two cups of mashed cooked squash, season to taste with salt and pepper and mix thoroughly with two slightly beaten eggs. Pour mixture into a buttered casserole and top with fine buttered bread crumbs and grated American cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until the mixture is thoroughly heated and has the appearance of a soft custard. Serve from the casserole. Grilled tomatoes, buttered corn and fresh green peas form excellent accompaniment for the dish of baked squash.

Culbertson On Bridge

Trust Your Partner.

"TRUST your partner" the saying goes — but I think it should have the warning postscript "and listen carefully to your opponents."

You will never have a partnership—and nothing is more important to a winning Bridge game—unless you have faith and confidence in your partner. On the other hand, you will never be a perfect partner unless you make allowances for those occasions, however rare, where your partner is wrong. The kind of allowances that count are not the kind that involve simply being understanding and pleasant after a mistake—they require understanding before it is too late for the mistake to be rectified.

Sometimes Believe Opponents.

North trusted his partner, but he saved him from a serious error in today's hand because he had listened to the opponents' bidding and reflected on what it meant.

North, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♢	1♡(1)	3♢(2)	3♡(3)
4♣(4)	4♡	4NT(5)	5♣(6)
5NT(7)	Pass	6♢(8)	Pass
6NT(9)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A sound non-vulnerable overcall.
2—Forcing to game.
3—West senses a good save.
5—Conventional—showing two Aces and the diamond King.
6—West wants to indicate a saving lead against six diamonds, hoping partner will have enough clubs to prevent a successful slam bid in that suit.
7—Conventional.
8—This was South's mistake. He should have bid a slam in clubs, but feared a possible long card loser in that suit.
9—North to the rescue with a brilliant bid. Heeding West's cue bid in clubs, he was warned of the impending ruff of the opening lead; if North-South could make six diamonds in spite of the club ruff, they could make six notrump surely and possibly seven.

The Play.

North's foresight proved wise. Played at diamonds, declarer would lose the first trick to a club ruff and later could not avoid the loss of a trick in spades. At notrump, however, 12 tricks were a laydown on the marked finesse for the Jack of clubs. It was a perfect case of trusting one's partner and one's opponents as well.

Vitamin Oil Applied To Skin Corrects Diet Deficiencies

Rubbing sunshine in through the skin is the latest way to add the sunshine vitamin—vitamin D—to the diet.

Confirmation has been obtained that if a substance containing this is applied to the skin, the vitamin factor passes through and supplies the deficiency in nutrition.

The most recent experiments along this line were made by Dr. P. S. Astrow and Dr. R. A. Morgan, according to the latest issue of "The American Journal of the Diseases of Children." The physicians applied viosterol, an oil containing vitamin D to the tails of rats that had been living on a diet designed to cause rickets. The rats did not get the rickets.

Another group living on the same diet were not given the benefit of oil containing vitamin D and developed rickets. Which proves "drinking" sunshine out of a bottle that contains the valuable vitamin is not the only way to correct a diet deficiency.

Wide Silk Sashes Return for Slim-Waisted Dresses

Those wide silk taffeta sashes which were our joy some 15 years ago are again being used around slim waists on heavy silk dresses.

Fats Are Taboo On Gall Stone Patient's Diet

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

BEFORE surgery came upon the gall-bladder stage to enact its beneficent role in removing disease, dietary management was the chief reliance of physicians, and many valuable suggestions grew out of their experiences.

Within recent years, however, due to a better understanding of the chemistry of foods, the dietary management of many conditions (including disease of the bile passages) has been greatly improved. Gall stone attacks (gall stone colic) have been studied in relation to food intake and an analysis of more than 1,000 cases showed that in 60 per cent the appearance of acute symptoms followed the eating of a meal consisting of a substantial quantity of fat.

Just what effect fatty food has on the gall bladder has not been explained, although it is probable that it stimulates first the liver and secondarily the gall bladder. One investigator showed that overeating plus constipation would bring on gall bladder pain in a high percentage of cases.

Frying in Fat Harmful.

Much has been written about a substance contained in fats known as cholesterol. This is one of the chief constituents of gall stones and, in order to prevent the formation of stones, foods that are rich in cholesterol, such as egg yolk, butter, cream, liver and calves' brains, are either reduced greatly in amount or omitted entirely. Foods fried in fat of any kind are particularly objectionable. In this connection foods containing vitamin A are important, as the absence of this particular vitamin may favor stone formation.

Many authorities believe that whenever gall bladder disease exists there is an accompanying inflammation of the liver that at times may be fairly extensive. Whenever such a condition is present starches should make up a larger part of the diet.

Exercise Is Important.

We may say, then, that the diet of the gall bladder patient should be largely fresh vegetables, with starches and sugars and one helping of lean meat per day. In this way the patient can be maintained in excellent nutrition and constipation will be cared for through the increased amount of cellulose supplied by vegetables. (We have a list of permitted foods for those whose gall bladders do not function properly. Send a stamped and addressed envelope for this sheet.)

Exercise is important, because muscular movements stimulate the flow of bile and relieve stagnation within the liver. Walking and all forms of sports in moderation are advocated, and even the old-fashioned setting up exercises are of value. If some slight pain and a full feeling occure regularly after meals hot packs over the liver area will relieve the congestion.

J. Joy Edson Is Buried With Military Rites

Many Friends Attend Funeral Service at Arlington.

John Joy Edson, pioneer Washington financier and philanthropist, was buried with military honors in Arlington National Cemetery yesterday afternoon while representatives of the Capital's business and social life bowed their heads in tribute to his memory.

A guard of honor from Fort Myer stood at present arms as the caisson bearing the body of the 89-year-old veteran of the War Between the States arrived at the flower-decked grave.

Before the casket was lowered, soldiers raised rifles to their shoulders. Three sharp volleys cracked into the still air. Then a bugler sounded taps, the notes penetrating the far reaches of the cemetery, where rest the comrades with whom Mr. Edson wore Federal blue in the sixties.

Services for Mr. Edson were held in the Swedenborgian Church of the Holy City at 2 p. m.

Officiating at the rites, the Rev. Saul Sperry, pastor of the church and long a friend of Mr. Edson, told of the part the aged benefactor had played in the life of the community he entered as a boy, fresh from the battlefields, at the age of 17.

He spoke briefly of Mr. Edson's patriotism and substantial philanthropies—of the part he played in the development of Washington and of the loss suffered by the District in the death of one of its most distinguished citizens.

Family Wore White.

In accordance with the Swedenborgian custom, members of Mr. Edson's family wore white mourning. His survivors, Mrs. Bessie Edson, his daughter, and John Joy Edson 3d, Bennett Edson, Mrs. Jane Edson Livingston, Edson Alden Edson, Mrs. Elizabeth Edson Butt and Gilbert Grosvenor Edson, his grandchildren, entered the church before the flag-draped casket.

Two hymns, selected by Mrs. Edson, were sung. There was a short prayer and the Rev. Sperry recited the Twenty-third Psalm.

These included the Washington Loan & Trust Co., the Family Service Association, District of Columbia Bankers Association, John Dickson Home, United States Chamber of Commerce, Columbia National Bank, Columbia Lodge, F. A. A. M., American Security & Trust Co., Riggs National Bank, Grand Army of the Republic, Union Trust Co., Board of Public Welfare, National Savings & Trust Co., Munsey Trust Co., National Metropolitan Bank, Washington Board of Trade, Lincoln National Bank, Hamilton National Bank, Equitable Building Association, National Geographic Society, George Washington University and the Society of Oldest Inhabitants.

Honorary Pallbearers.

Honorary pallbearers were Harry G. Meem, Arthur Peter, George A. King, Carl B. Keferstein, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, Frank J. Stryker, James A. Messer, John Saul, Harper Sibley, William Butterworth, Harry A. Wheeler, Ralph P. Barnard, Frederick V. Colville, Walter S. Pratt, jr., William W. Willoughby, Dr. Charles E. Munroe, Col. E. D. Godfrey, Gen. John A. Johnston, Allen C. Clark, Frederick W. McReynolds, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Commissioner George Allen, Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, Alfred V. Cox, George Hamilton, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Harry C. Davis and Herbert A. Poole.

The grave of Mr. Edson is not far from that of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, renowned health expert, with whom he was a close friend.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 18.—Miss Annie Smith Peck, 84, noted as a mountain climber and one of the early leaders in the fight for women's suffrage, died late today in her suite at the Hotel Monterey after an illness of two weeks.

Before she began mountain climbing she taught mathematics in high schools, was professor of Latin at Smith College and Purdue University, and lectured throughout the Nation on Greek archeology.

She ascended Mount Carcovado to fulfill a promise made in 1912 that she would perform the feat when women's suffrage became universal in the United States.

Bertie R. Evans Mount Jackson Beauty Queen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Mount Jackson, Va., July 18.—When six judges became hopelessly deadlocked in the final selection of "Miss Mount Jackson of 1935" here Tuesday night, a woman from Pennsylvania, who refused to give her name, was selected from the audience to choose between Miss Bertie R. Evans and Miss Mary Josephine Price to bear the title for the ensuing year.

Final selection was made in favor of Miss Evans, 16, brunette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Evans, who was awarded a silver loving cup. Miss Evans will be this city's representative in the annual valley-wide contest for selection of "Miss Shenandoah Valley," which will be held at New Market this summer.

Miss Price, 19, runner-up, in which 27 young women of the community participated, also is a brunette and is the daughter of W. J. Price, of Mount Jackson.

Judges were R. H. Campbell, of Washington; G. William Sedwick, of Luray; A. J. Mills, of Richmond; L. M. Lawler, of Luray; H. E. Estep and T. R. Beahm, of New Market. Miss Mildred Coffman, Edinburg, Va., was mistress of ceremonies.

Tax Sale Approved In Allegany Ruling

Cumberland, Md., July 17 (AP).—Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, of Allegany County Circuit Court, today upheld the right of Tax Collector W. E. C. Hitchins to sell for unpaid taxes property on which the defunct Citizens National Bank of Frostburg holds judgments.

The court sustained the demurrer filed by Hitchins to the action instituted by Thomas B. Finan, receiver for the bank, who sought to restrain Hitchins from selling the property for unpaid taxes. The ruling held that the only remedy the receiver had was to pay the taxes on the properties on which the bank held judgments.

Highway Work Delay Is Laid To High Awards

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 18.—High awards of commissioners appointed to appraise property needed for rights of way on route 50, the main highway east and west through Winchester, were held responsible today by F. D. Henley, right-of-way engineer, for indefinite postponement of construction of an important section of the road east of here.

Reviewing the situation in acknowledging the request of Andrew Bell, chamber of commerce, Mr. Henley declared construction was abandoned because of inability to obtain rights along 430 feet of property owned by Mrs. Ellen R. Wheeler, 1,100 feet owned by Mrs. E. V. Cook and 200 feet owned by J. B. Cook, all of Clarke County. An agreement could not be obtained with R. B. Golightly, of this county, for 5.64 acres.

Comparing the valuation placed on the property with the assessed valuation, Mr. Henley asserted that in the case of the Golightly property, an offer of $809 was made and the commissioners awarded $2,522.80 when the county records show there are 217.75 acres in the entire property assessed for taxes at $2,920 for land and $700 for buildings, the commissioners allowing approximately 70 per cent of the total assessed value of the whole farm, while less than 3 per cent of the land was to be taken.

Of Mrs. Cook's property, 1.52 acres were desired. An offer of $1,000 was made and the commissioners appraised it at $1,728. The property is assessed at $23 an acre, $821, and the improvements at $600. In this case, Mr. Henley noted, the award was for $507 more than the total assessed value of the entire tract and improvements.

The State offered $675 and the commissioners awarded $2,075 to J. B. Cook for 24-100 of an acre. There is 1 acre of land assessed at $50. Condemination against Mrs. Wheeler was dropped when the State learned of the other awards and construction has been halted.

Tobacco Raisers and Turkeys Start Annual Drive on Worms

By the Associated Press.

Leonardtown, Md., July 18.—Southern Maryland tobacco growers—and southern Maryland turkeys—have turned to in their annual campaign against the horn worm, which is beginning its attack on tobacco plants.

The first crop of worms appears late in June and in July, and unless stamped out will be followed by a more severe outbreak in September, with great damage resulting to the tobacco crop.

Growers combat the worms with flocks of turkeys or with a dusting or spraying formula. Turkeys turned loose in the fields will "bug the tobacco" for the growers and will grow fat at the same time, thus accomplishing a double purpose.

Southern Maryland's tobacco crop is worth approximately $9,000,000 yearly.

Sale to VERA Eases State's Potato Crisis

35 Carloads Bought at Richmond and More Will Be Ordered.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, July 18.—Speeding to Richmond by airplane, Milton T. Hickman, prominent in the Eastern Shore potato embargo, today obtained from Virginia relief officials an order for an initial purchase of 35 carloads of the tubers.

This is the first tangible result of the decision, announced at Washington several days ago, of Federal officials to aid the Eastern Shoremen in their campaign for more profitable prices.

Hickman said the 35 cars were shipped from the Eastern Shore today to Virginia destinations, and orders for another 80 cars were expected to be filled tomorrow. Relief officails have informed him that 560 cars will be purchased altogether from Eastern Shore farmers, Hickman said.

Faced Big Losses.

Today's orders were filled at the $1.60 a barrel price set by the executive committee of the growers several days ago, when demand almost vanished in the face of a pegged price of $2.10.

Haste was necessary to save the cooperating farmers from mounting demurrage charges on potatoes already loaded on cars, the Eastern Shore leader explained.

He was accompanied here by Paul Rogers, relief administrator for Accomac County, and W. B. Copeland, of Norfolk and the Eastern Shore. They came to Norfolk by ferry this morning and chartered a plane at Norfolk Airport for the flight to Richmond.

The party remained here overnight and planned to confer with relief heads about future orders tomorrow. Hickman said he and his party conferred with William A. Smith and other VERA officials today.

Farmers Hopeful.

Hickman said his party was acting under authority from the five-man committee given virtual dictatorial powers over the marketing situation when the Eastern Shore farmers first rebelled at prices as low as $1.25 a barrel and took matters into their own hands.

The shore representative said the paramount consideration now was to move the potatoes now loaded for shipment so that accumulating demurrage charges would be cut off before they absorbed all the tubers would bring.

Hickman said the farmers were confident they could move the remainder of the crop in orderly fashion at reasonably good prices after the relief agency relieved the pressure of the portion now packed for shipment.

$100,000 Fire Destroys Petersburg, Va., Plant

Petersburg, Va., July 18 (AP).—An early morning blaze, believed to have been caused by faulty electrical wiring, destroyed the plant of the Petersburg Excelsior Co. with loss estimated at $100,000. The fire swept rapidly through the plant, but three fire companies managed to prevent its spread to one storehouse and an oil and gasoline storage plant located nearby.

Steamship Passenger Found Dead in Bed

Baltimore, July 18 (AP).—James J. Butler, 60-year-old patient from the United States Marine Hospital at Philadelphia, was found dead in his bed on the Ericsson Line steamer John Cadwalader, a half hour before it docked here today.

Dr. H. E. Schellenger, of the United States Health Service, said a heart attack was the cause of death. Police were told Butler was being transferred to the United States Marine Hospital here. Relatives in Philadelphia were notified.

Court Rules Md. Railroad May Operate

Baltimore & Annapolis Run Permitted in Decision of Judge.

He Rejects Pennsylvania Bid to Buy Line Serving Washington.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 18.—Operation of the North Shore line of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Railroad between this city and Annapolis was approved today by Judge William C. Coleman.

At the same time Coleman's order authorized sale of portions of the railroad property, now in receivership, including rolling stock and tracking on the Baltimore-Washington line, and rejected an offer by the Pennsylvania Railroad to buy and operate that portion of the road running from Fort Meade Junction to Annapolis that gives Washingtonians electric service to the Maryland capital.

Abandonment of operation of the road on all its lines has been under consideration for several months. Application for abandonment was filed by the receiver on April 10 and at the same time the District of Columbia Commissioners in Washington issued a protest. The State public service commission held hearings on the application later in April, taking testimony of persons living along the railroad who would be affected by disruption of service.

It has been believed generally that the immediate cause of the road's difficulties was failure of the Maryland State Legislature to exempt the railroad from taxation, a concession granted in previous years.

Bandits Get $3,000 In Bank Robbery

Burkeville Branch Held Up by 2 Armed Men.

By the Associated Press.

Burkeville, Va., July 18.—Two bandits, dressed in overalls, held up the Burkeville branch of the Bank of Crewe this afternoon and escaped in an automobile.

Their loot was estimated at $3,000 in cash.

State police were notified the men left in a coach or sedan and sped in the direction of Victoria, about 15 miles south.

W. H. Sheffield, cashier, said one of the robbers was armed with a machine gun.

Sheffield and Miss Theresa Redford, assistant cashier, dashed from the bank as the robbers drove away and notified Police Chief L. D. Cole. Sheffield was unable to give a complete description of the men because of the masks, but he said both were heavy-set and wore overalls and caps. One appeared to be between 35 and 40 years old and the other 40 to 45, he said.

Fugitive's Drowning Declared Accidental

Annapolis, Md., July 18 (AP).—Police Magistrate Joseph M. Armstrong today gave a verdict of accidental drowning in the case of Andrew Dickson, 30-year-old Eastport resident, who took to the water to escape arrest on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Patrolman Samuel Jones, of the Annapolis police force, said he attempted to arrest Dickson today and that Dickson jumped into a rowboat, and paddled up Back Creek, near here. Later, the boat was found abandoned and drifting in the creek.

Searchers dragged the creek and the body was recovered by Kinsey Turner, a waterman.

Marie De Vautibault on Way to New York to Promote Her Play.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 18.—Comtesse Marie Elizabeth de Vautibault, whose father is said to have designed the engine for the first airplane of the Wright brothers, arrived in this country today to give American drama some of the "art" she says it needs.

The smartly attired French countess disembarked from the liner City of Baltimore here from Europe on her way to New York to convince theatrical producers there her play has just the vital touch the theater is crying out for.

"There has been too much intellect and not enough art in drama," asserted the 25-year-old countess with a gesture of her red-enameled fingers. "Let me explain. Art is the pure expression of Nature through the sensitive soul of the artist. When the brain assumes command the expression is no longer art."

The vivacious artist kept both the title and plot of her play a secret. It is her first theater effort in English and she did not desire to discuss it in detail until she had the benefit of some Broadway criticism.

The countess has a rich heritage in American tradition in another field. She is a daughter of Leo Bollee, credited with drawing the plans for the motor of the pioneer Wright plane. She is a god-child of Wilbur Wright, one of the two brothers whose aeronautical achievement on the sandy stretches near Kitty Hawk, N. C., opened a new chapter in man's conquest of space.

Waters of St. Mary's Swarming With Fish

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 18.—Fishermen who come to St. Mary's waters to try their luck are richly rewarded now, as the season, a little late this year, is in full swing.

Richard Webster and party, of Baltimore, yesterday caught 11 rock, weighing from 11 to 15 pounds each, and a half-bushel of hardheads and spots in the lower Potomac, and similar reports are coming in daily from all sections.

At times many fish are left in the boats, as those catching them select the largest to have iced and take home to prove their skill to their friends, and have no room to carry the remainder.

U. of Md. Chief Severs Contact With Business

Byrd Announces Action as Foreclosures Start at College Park.

H. C. Byrd recently appointed acting president of the University of Maryland, announced yesterday that he will resign all positions not connected with the university.

The announcement followed the filing at Upper Marlboro of three mortgage foreclosure suits against the College Park Corporation, with which Mr. Byrd is affiliated. Commenting on this, the university head declared it meant he was "through with real estate."

Other nonuniversity "jobs" which he declared he intended giving up included the vice presidency of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co., of Hyattsville and Mount Rainier, and the writing of sports stories for a Washington newspaper.

Zanvyl Krieger, of Baltimore, was named assignee for the purpose of foreclosing the mortgages, held by the Finance Co. of America, with offices in Baltimore.

While two of the suits were filed against the College Park Corporation directly, the third was against the Calvert Manor Corporation, a holding company for the original corporation.

In the suit to foreclose on the Calvert Manor organization, it was stated that a blanket mortgage of the entire tract was held, amounting to $55,000. The mortgage was dated January 13, 1925.

One of the two suits against the College Park Corporation proper was to foreclose on five lots on which there was an indebtedness of $31,000, dated May 2, 1934. The other was to foreclose a mortgage valued at $5,500, on one lot and a portion of another.

The suits were filed by the law firm of Weinberg & Sweeten, of Baltimore.

Virginia Press Steamer, Barge Collide in Fog

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 18.—A near-serious collision with a barge in a fog furnished excitement today for members of the Virginia State Press Association arriving here from Norfolk aboard the steamer Robert E. Lee. No damage of consequence was done, but the incident brought praise for the seamanship of the ship's officers.

The steamer was proceeding north about 14 miles south of Barnegat lightship, with visibility limited to something like 200 yards, when the whistle of the barge sounded ahead and about 10 to 15 degrees off the port bow. Capt. J. S. Hannan ordered the engines stopped and the steamer drifted ahead slowly under her own momentum.

Suddenly the barge loomed out of the fog, low on the ater and headed toward the steamer. The barge swung sharply off to the right and almost cleared the steamer, her stern swinging against the Robert E. Lee a short distance back of the port bow.

Capt. Hannan had the stern of the steamer swung around to avoid the blow, but at her greatly reduced speed it was too slow.

William Atkinson, managing editor of the Roanoke Times, and Al Bernard, a linotype representative, were standing on the bow and witnessed the near collision. Atkinson said the only damage appeared to be a splintered rail and a bent davit on the barge.

Seamen aboard the barge waved to the steamer to proceed, as they rapidly disappeared astern in the fog.

Richmond Paper Asserts He Will Announce Within Few Days.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, July 18.—The News-Leader today said Lieut. Gov. James H. Price of Virginia will announce his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the governorship "within a few days, probably Sunday."

Mr. Price will announce "in order that his friends may not commit themselves beforehand to some other candidate," the newspaper said.

Falling Roof Hurts Seven Workmen

Court Building Collapses at Front Royal.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., July 18.—John Compton, about 55, of Front Royal, suffered a fractured leg and is in Winchester Hospital, and six other workmen received minor injuries, when the roof and attic floor of the 99-year-old Warren County Courthouse collapsed this morning.

The men were engaged in demolishing the building preparatory to the construction of a new courthouse, for which voters approved a $50,000 bond issue on July 8. The framework of the building was mortised together, and the structure gave way, it was said, when a key pin broke. The old courthouse was used as a military hospital during the War Between the States. Excavation for the new courthouse was begun yesterday.

"The Scoundrel", Starring Noel Coward, Is Stimulus to Mild Mental Gymnastics

Unique Screen Play Is Smart Writing Chore

Talk Too Good to Be True; Deadline for Cruise; Theater Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

When they view it on the silver sheet at Loew's Palace Theater beginning tomorrow, those occupants of the anxious seat who have been so fearful that it would never reach a Washington screen will discover that "The Scoundrel" will do with a bit of close attention and serious application.

This was apprehended by the drama desks yesterday afternoon when the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur vehicle for the screen debut of the debonair Mr. Noel Coward was unspooled privately in the projection room of the Fox Film Exchange.

It has been said that the only sly subterfuge to which the astute and literate Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur resorted in seducing the screen-shy Mr. Coward into signing a motion-picture contract was to write a play that he liked.

They succeeded so admirably that, walking into the theater after the main title and credits of the picture have been shown, one might readily be pardoned for suspecting that he had stumbled upon a celluloid charade which Mr. Coward had written for himself. Whether they have succeeded as brilliantly in writing a camera drama that the public, in addition to Mr. Coward, will like, is something else again, as the saying is.

A Colossal Egotist.

"The Scoundrel" deals with the love life of a New York publisher whose supersophistication engendered a despicable and smug cynicism that distrusted everything but his own vast egotism. A constant stream of shallow epigrams and spurious platitudes flowed constanly from his lips, and about him there was neither constancy nor truth. Then he met the girl.

From this point onward through its length "The Scoundrel" is a slightly modified triangle tale of two men and a woman, with a final touch of eerie symbolism that will prove a little perplexing to those who have been accustomed to seeing their gelatin love stories end in the conventional "clinch."

If, as some have contended, "The Scoundrel" is written entirely in an off-key, then it is because the authors have made it so excessively "smart," so burdened with bright sayings and specious philosophies, as to raise a reasonable doubt that any group of people—even those literati hovering about the fringes of the publishing business—could sustain such pungent and penetrating conversations without frequent references to the copybook maxims and postcard verses!

The play moves with directness and precision and is peopled by characters who abjure most of the tricks of the "movie actors" and are pretty much themselves.

An Intellectual Frolic.

Stress has been laid upon the psychological aspects of the story, with only secondary interest in the usually essential matters of costuming, elaborate settings and lighting and camera tricks.

An occasional revoler shot, aimed where it is thought it will do the most good to "the scoundrel's" soul—if any—from time to time translates the action into terms that all audiences can understand, but most of the way the dialogue and plot development are for the auditor not averse to limbering up his own mental mechanisms.

The greater part of the movement of the story may be followed understandingly with the eyes closed.

The attitude of those in charge of booking entertainment for the Loew houses in Washington, following the publication of numerous public appeals in these columns for a local showing of the picture so widely discussed elsewhere, seems to have been, "Well, you asked for it, so there it is."

Those who have progressed beyond the primary grades of "movie" appreciation ought to be glad of it.

At 5 o'clock yesterday evening, it was made known by the regularly accredited publicity department of the National Civic Theater Society that the next play at The Odeon, on the grounds of the National Park Seminary, at Forest Glen, Md., would be Noel Coward's "The Young Idea."

At 6 o'clock yesterday evening, this was enthusiastically negated by the same announcer and Margaret Hatfield's original play of "Till Death Us Do Part" was stated to be on the fire.

By now, it may be "Uncle Tim's Carbine," "Peer Squint," or whatnot for all I know.

One thing, however, has not yet been contradicted and that is that hereafter the Civic Theater group will open their new bills on alternate Mondays with the Roadside Theater and run each one two weeks. This plan will avoid conflicting first nights as effectively as the Tuesday night opening at The Odeon that had been previously planned.

Watch That Deadline!

Today is the day when a tentative "deadline" runs against the purchase of tickets for the first Showboat Cruise down the Potomac, sponsored by the Variety Club of Washington.

It is one of my firmer personal suspicions that if a prospective purchaser were to wave a handful of money in the face of any member of the Variety Club tomorrow, or even Saturday morning, with a loud clamor for tickets, he would be supplied. However, that is not altogether the point.

It is obvious to anyone who will stop and think that to prepare intelligently and efficiently for the comfort and enjoyment of those who will avail themselves of the cruise as one of the summer's most attractive outings, it is necessary for those in charge to know at least the approximate number for which they will be called upon to provide.

So form that line to the right of any member of Variety Club, Tent No. 11, and lay your cash on the line for those pasteboards!

Two Hot Bands—One Hotter.

The cruise will take off from the dock of the Wilson Line Saturday midnight, returning to the same spot somewhere around 3 a. m. Sunday morning.

The tickets are $2 each and purchasers are urged to present themselves at the wharf not later than 11:30 p. m. Saturday, to facilitate comfortable and leisurely boarding of the ship.

Music will be furnished by two "name" bands—Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears and Jolly Coburn's Rainbow Room Orchestra from Rockefeller Center, two of the liveliest aggregations pushing concords of sweet sound out of the ends of saxophones and hot trumpets.

There will be various surprises calculated to make $2 per person a bargain price for a swell time.

The proceeds of the cruise will go to swell the welfare fund of the Variety Club, which already has been the source of several helpful aids to worthy charities.

But the important thing is, GET THOSE TICKETS and have yourself a time!

A flash from the West Coast is to the effect that construction work has begun on the new building project on the Warner Brothers-First National lot in Burbank, Calif., originally announced here several weeks ago.

Nine new sound stages are to be erected in addition to those now in use, as well as a new office building, a new property building and a battery of vaults for storing films. A crafts building, to house all the shops, foundries and mills destroyed by fire earlier this year, also will be built.

When completed the W. B.-F. N. studio will be the largest single plant of its kind in the world.

It is estimated that from 1,000 to 3,000 workers will be kept busy during the eight months it is expected to take to complete the project.

A Good Cast, by Hecht!

If it may be permissible to revert briefly to "The Scoundrel"—whether it may be or not, for the matter of that—there are enough big names in the cast to engage the average moviegoer's attention, whether primary interest attaches to the story or whether it doesn't.

To begin with, of course, there is Mr. Coward, already modestly celebrated in these dispatches.

Then there is Alexander Woollcott, former dramatic critic, essayist and radio raconteur of parts, who made his stage debut in this city with Francine Larrimore in S. N. Behrman's play of "Brief Moment," at the Belasco. Mr. Woollcott, in his present assignment, precisely as he did with Miss Larrimore, plays himself—a cherubic, pudgy gentleman, with a penchant for smart speech and caustic observation. I thought yesterday at the preview that he didn't do any better than he should have by some of the lines intrusted to him.

Then, again, there are Julie Haydon, who acts rings around everybody else in the cast; Hope Williams, Eduardo Gianelli, remembered for many excellent character jobs, foremost among them the staunch adherent of the exiled Hapsburg in Robert Emmett Sherwood's "Reunion in Vienna," with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne; William Ricciardi, the original speakeasy proprietor in "Strictly Dishonorable," and Stanley Ridges, former leading man of the National Theater Players and last season one of the principals in support of Philip Merivale, in Maxwell Anderson's "Valley Forge," at the National.

There are, needless to say, more; but that will give you an idea.

When Du Maurier's "Trilby" is produced by the Roadside Theater Co., and presented for the fortnight beginning Monday, June 29, Carey Lucas and Denis Connell will be cast in the practically immortal roles of Trilby and the bewhiskered and hypnotic Svengali. In assuming these roles, Miss Lucas and Mr. Connell will be following in the footsteps of the illustrious.

When the play was first presented in America in 1895, these respective parts were played by Virginia Harned and the late Wilton Lackaye. Mr. Lackaye's name was linked with that of Svengali throughout the life of the Du Maurier work as a perennial favorite. He revived the role he had created in notable productions of the play in 1905 and again in 1915.

Miss Harned, as goes without saying, was the first wife of the late E. H. Sothern, and, in her day, one of America's most gifted and most popular actresses.

Identification Card.

Speaking of next week's stage headliner at the Earle, it may or may not be significant that the anagram of Ina Ray Hutton is 'A Youth Rantin'!

And you will be, too, when you see her.

Their Talents Decorate Screen

The attenuated and serious young man pictured above at the left is that versatile gentleman of the theater, Noel Coward, who makes his screen debut in "The Scoundrel," a psychological charade by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, which will be seen on the screen at Loew's Palace beginning tomorrow. At right, is a somber likeness of Joan Crawford, who, with Robert Montgomery, Franchot Tone, Edna May Oliver and Charles Ruggles, will continue to divert cinemaddicts at the Columbia through a second week of "No More Ladies" in its extended return engagement.

New Programs Announced for Ensuing Week

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

Noel Coward, actor, playwright and composer, will make his screen debut at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow in the stellar and title role of "The Scoundrel," an original camera drama by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur. In this psychological study of a smug and self-satisfied sophisticate, Mr. Coward has a role that he might have written himself. He is supported by an especially capable cast led by Julie Haydon, Stanley Ridges, Martha Sleeper, Hope Williams, Rosita Moreno, Alexander Woollcott and scores of others. The supplementary features of the program will embrace a new Thelma Todd-Patsy Kelly comedy, a new natural color Silly Symphony, "The Robber Kitten," a Metro Oddity reel and Metrotone News.

• • • •

"College Scandal" is the title of the murder-mystery film play, with a campus background, that will be seen for the first time on a local screen for the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. The foremost roles are played by Kent Taylor, Arline Judge, Eddie Nugent, Wendy Barrie, Mary Nash, William Frawley, Joyce Compton and a host of others. Some clever songs and dance numbers are introduced during the sterner action of the major plot. The stage bill will be headlined by Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears, one of the sprightliest of the stage bands, and also will include Jack Pepper, with Terry Howard and Sammy Cantor, and Selden and Endler. Universal News and orchestra, under Freddie Clark, will round out the bill.

• • • •

Edgar Wallace's stirring novel of love and adventure in the African Congo, "Sanders of the River," will occupy the screen at Loew's Fox in pictorial form, beginning tomorrow, with Paul Robeson, Nina Mae McKinney and Leslie Banks in the principal roles. The picture was produced in England and on location by Alexander Korda. The stage bill will be headlined by Jolly Coburn and his Rainbow Room Orchestra from Rockefeller Center in New York, and will also include, as an extra added attraction, "Betty Boop" Questel, voice of the movie cartoon comedies. Other acts will be Paul Gerrits and the Erner & Fisher Revue. Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's music will augment the program.

• • • •

Monogram Pictures' film version of Gene Stratton Porter's story of "The Keeper of the Bees" will be the major attraction on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater for the week beginning tomorrow morning. In the widely popular roles of Jamie and Molly will be seen Neil Hamilton and Betty Furness. Edith Fellowes will be seen as "Little Scout" and others in the cast will include Emma Dunn, Hobart Bosworth, Helen Jerome Eddy and Barbara Bedford. Short-reel subjects and Pathe News will complete the entertainment.

• • • •

"The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes," with Arthur Wontner again appearing as the redoubtable sleuth, is announced as the chief screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater. Once again Holmes finds himself confronted by the challenge of his arch-enemy, Prof. Moriarty. It is a duel to the death between the pair that is pictured. Lyn Harding is cast as Moriarty, Bernice Claire in a new musical reel, "Love Department," and full newsreel complete the bill.

• • • •

So great has been the demand to see Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery, Franchot Tone, Edna May Oliver, Charles Ruggles and the other members of the excellent cast in "No More Ladies," that that lively picturization of the A. E. Thomas stage success will be continued another week at Loew's Columbia, beginning tomorrow. The auxiliary attractions also will be held over for this second extended F street engagement.

These hot, muggy days are precisely what was required to send attendance records at Glen Echo Park soaring to new heights. With more than 50 amusement devices in full operation, this free-admission amusement center is really an amusement center. Most popular among the resort's attractions are the Crystal Pool, with a capacity of 3,000 bathers, and the Spanish Garden Ballroom, with MacWilliams 12-piece orchestra for dancing. The many rides in the park are both cooling and thrilling.

Hangar Club's Band Is on Job Until 2 A. M.

And Musicians Sign Off Without the Customary 'Home, Sweet Home.'

By Chanticleer.

All my life I've had a horror of that moment which eventually arrives in the course of any evening out when the band slips into the melancholy strains of "Home, Sweet Home" or whatever the band chooses to use to send the customers home so the boys can catch a few hours of sleep and get out to the golf course before noon.

There's something dismal in those last few minutes . . . realizing that the lights are going out at the tables along the wall . . . and there just isn't any place else to go.

That is . . . I did feel unhappy about that situation in general until the word came along from the Big Chief in charge of Early Morning Affairs at the Hangar Club.

• • • •

In the future there will be no "Home, Sweet Home" or its counterpart at the Hangar Club. From now on when you have reached the end of the evening at Cousin Joe's . . . all you have to do is say to the hacker: "To the other side of the river, and don't spare the horses" . . . and there, my friends, you will find the lights turned up and the music still torrid.

• • • •

Two o'clock, the Hangar Club band goes home . . . or somewhere . . . and Joe and Jack, the Society Serenaders, pull down the old banjo and guitar from the top shelf. Its the only place I know where you can sit comfortably on the roof veranda and watch the night mail come in from points North and South . . . with a cooling draught in one hand and sweet music in the air.

• • • •

Note to the ladies: Statisticians say that one out of each 1,000 of your sex always is on time. Now, if you belong to the 999, here is a suggestion that can prevent a three-hour argument any time.

The next time you make an appointment with Clarence . . . to meet him downtown . . . pick out the Mayfair. It has been discovered that the murals adorning the walls of this cool spot will hold Clarence's interest for at least 30 to 40 minutes.

After that he may become irritated. But by that time you probably have decided to go gadding with Mortimer instead . . . so you'll never know how sore he really was. And you always can feel some bit of consolation in knowing he enjoyed himself thoroughly while waiting.

Don't mention it.

• • • •

These Hawaiians at the Hi-Hat put a bee in the Gingham Club bonnet when they got new costumes a short time ago. Now the Gingham Club is calling in the designers . . . and in the not-too-distant future the little trousers-and-blouse exponents will be smiling down at you in brand-new rigging.

• • • •

Incidentally, the Hangar Club has nothing on the Mayfair . . . when it comes to entertainers named Jack and Joe. The Mayfair Jack and Joe have no guitar . . . but they have a pygmy piano they shove all over the place. While Jack sings, Joe pours out about as nice a piano as we've heard in these poor parts in a long time. Or perhaps it's Joe who sings. That allocation of names and talents has never been straightened out in my mind.

• • • •

Prof. Al Norton, of the Frankie and Johnnie Nortons at the Lotus Restuaurant . . . should be able to romp to town in a floor presentation with Bill Strickland and all the Capitolians . . . using the swell little novelty tune, "Turkish Delight," as the motif . . . Or maybe Prof. Norton already has done this number.

• • • •

Item for the ringsiders at the Shoreham Terrace tonight: When Barnee lays down his baton after a dance group, surge up to the band stand and collar Mike Fera, Barnee's pianist . . . Blindfold Mr. Fera . . . Then clear the band stand of musicians . . . Turn Mr. Fera around and around until he is slightly discombobulated . . . Face him into the band stand and let him grasp the first instrument he comes on . . . firmly betwen the thumb and forefinger. You will be surprised to learn that if the instrument has strings, reeds or brass . . . Mr. Fera will play it as though he had been playing it all his life. It's a nice summer evening game and will prove that Mr. Fera knows his basses and trumpets.

• • • •

Before the week is over I will be perched on a chair at the horseshoe bar at Maryland Club Gardens. I have just been informed that Pat, who was so expert at mixing things out of little bottles . . . to make the ailing well . . . has been missing these last few weeks because of a serious injury to his arm. As a matter of fact, the word I have before me is to the effect that Pat has recuperated from a severed arm . . . and if that is true . . . and Pat is now back at the old stand . . . mixing theses and thoses with only one arm . . . I want to be there and see how it's done. I've tried for years to mix a good drink with two hands . . . and I have precious little luck.

• • • •

Paul, of the Club Habana, was the most interested person on the Arlington roof when the moon went into eclipse the other night . . . and now I understand. Paul advises me that he is a bit of an astronomer . . . and that not one night in 50 has the roof failed to be cool and comfortable . . . just like a place in the mountains.

Hawaiian Vogue in Prospect

Anticipating a vogue in Hawaiian music this fall, Griffith Farms got away to a fast start and established a group of musicians who play the entire range of musical compositions for dining and dancing. A special orchestra provides dance rhythms for Saturday nights.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Broadway Looking Glass

New York, July 18.

Recently when Jimmy Braddock won the world's heavyweight championship, there was a homely lesson in his first instinctive thought of his wife and youngsters. The money meant to him that his family, who had been on relief doles would have a chance to live nicely. Along came Joe Louis, a Detroit fighter, and another homely lesson was provided in the son's affectionate regard for his mother. And now comes Countess Wurmbrand - Stuppach before Supreme Court Justice Salvatore Cotillo. I daresay that the family tree of the Wurmbrand-Stuppachs is much more impressive than the family trees of Braddock and Louis. But dry rot has set in and the family tree, in decay, produces decadent limbs. In annulling the Countess' marriage to young Clendenin J. Ryan, Cotillo finds written evidence that the mother of the countess sent the daughter here, cold-bloodedly, to pick a rich American husband so that the young countess could support the mother and also support the girl's lover. I think there is truer royalty in the Braddocks and the Louises than in the Wurmbrand-Stuppach line, or am I wrong again?

Because I start my vacation and will be out of town when twenty-sixth edition of the Cotton Cub show premiers, Herman Stark was good enough to give me a preview of it yesterday afternoon—the first time I ever saw a night cub show in broad daylight. In a club disordered by the carpenters and decorators refitting it for the new show, the performers raced through the routines that will be unveiled on opening night. I liked best the "Truckin' Down" number led by Cora La Redd. "Truckin'," in Harlem, is a description of a peculiar slouchy walk, and the new dance has the same contagion of rhythm that made an instantaneous hit of the Black Bottom when Tom Patricoa and Ann Pennington brought it to town. With one shoulder hoisted, the dancers do a spraddle-legged walk that finally gives you a terrific yen to try it yourself. This highlights the fast and furious show which Ted Koehler and Elida Webb have prepared, and in addition you'll like Nina Mae McKinney, Juno Hernandez, Babe Matthews, Miller and Mantan and young Constance Smith. The show this time is pure jungle stuff. The Cotton Club has removed the high hat and put on a checkered vest and a huge diamond stickpin. It's back in character.

Notes: Al Davis and Marianne will thrash it out in Reno . . . Georges Metaxa, romantic Rumanian tenor, is the town's best supper club "draw" this season . . . . Metaxa has built up a tremendous patronage at the Stork Club, jamming 'em in . . . Only a short while ago, doctors in Miami despaired of his life after an auto crash that instantly killed his wife . . . Ironically, the operation that saved him changed the timbre of his voice, gave him the deep notes that make his voice appealing . . . Dorsey brothers, who split up the town's most discussed "hot" band, will be rivals . . . Tommy Dorsey has organized a new crew and will open at Walled Lake, Mich., outside of Detroit . . . Recommended: Ken Murray, in Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book," one of my favorite comics . . . And in the same show, the two greatest girl eccentric dancers I've ever seen, the Hudson Wonders . . . Justice Lauer threw out Milton Berle's action against Charlie Morrison.

Jack Waldron is the master of ceremonies at the famous Hollywood Restaurant. He is a smooth-faced, genial chap and a real trouper. His reminiscences of some of the "joints" he's worked in, in the passage of years, are models in hilarity, and some time I'm going to cram a book with the real characters he's met. But what I started out to report was that Waldron originally went into the Broadway hot spot on a two-week ticket. Last night, he started on his sixteenth week there. "Can't understand it," clowns Waldron, "because I've got a peculiar personality. You start off disliking me and it rapidly turns to hate." Watching this expert clown on a Broadway night club floor, it's difficult to remember that he served in Whittlesey's famous "Lost Battalion" of the Seventy-seventh Division.

• • • •

I've always envied the fellows who served in the war. I was in high school at the time, ran away, tried to join the Marines, but couldn't produce a birth certificate that would satisfy the U. S. Navy doctor. A letter the other day gave me a queer feeling. A chap wrote in, asking help to get a job, and very modestly listed his recommendations. He had won the Congressional Medal with his outfit. It seems to me that those fellows shouldn't have to be seeking jobs. I'm getting him one and he'll be appreciative, but he needn't be. The world, I think, really owes all of these fellows a living.

Noon Tomorrow Is Deadline On Wanderbird Reservations

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Trip Offers Many Attractions.

By Robert Shosteck.

Tomorrow noon is deadline for making reservations for the Wanderbird trip to Berkeley Springs, W. Va., and the scenic Appalachian trail along the crest of Cacapon Mountain. This hike of 5 miles will also include stops at Lover's Leap, Balanced Rock, the sand quarry and a tour of historic places in Berkeley Springs. Arrangements also have been made for a swim before dinner.

Post readers and club members who have not yet bought tickets at $2.50 each, can buy them until Saturday noon at the counter at The Post Building. The buses will leave at 7 a. m. for the 100-mile ride to the Blue Ridge. It is advisable to bring along a canteen, swim suit and food for two meals. The group should return to Washington by 10 p. m.

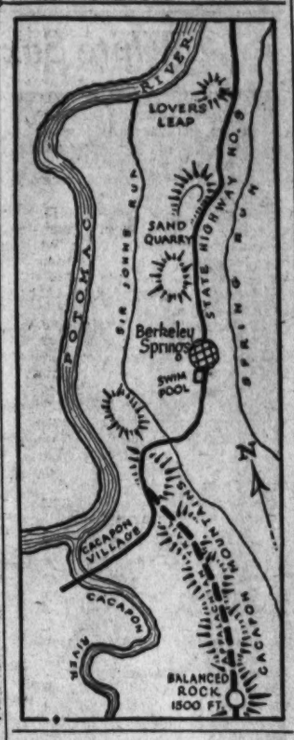
After crossing the Potomac at Hancock, the first stop will be at Lover's Leap, a rocky promontory which will provide a scenic lunch place with a fine view of the bend of the river. After eating, we continue by bus for 1 mile to an immense silica-sand quarry in which fossils hundreds of millions of years old can be found in abundance. Geological hikers should bring along paper bags or tins for their collections.

Boarding the buses once more, we ride through historic Berkeley Springs and across Sir John's Run to the Cacapon Mountain, where the Appalachian trail meets the highway. The 2½-mile hike along the crest of this mountain affords a fine view of the Potomac and Cacapon Valleys, as well as the apple orchards which stretch for 10 miles along the mountain slope. Off in the distance one can see Cacapon Village, sprawling on the edge of a meandering river of the same name.

In the vicinity of the giant Balanced Rock, the hikers will find a plentiful supply of delicious huckleberries, and all along the way one can find white pines and sweet birches. The group will retrace their steps along this easy 2½-mile trail, meeting the buses on the State highway. The wanderbirds will tour Berkeley Springs and then enjoy a swim in the pool near the highway.

If time permits, the hikers will visit the giant elm tree planted by George Washington and the warm springs, which were known to many tribes of Eastern Indians as "the healing waters."

Old town records seem to confirm the belief that George Washington was greatly interested in the establishment of this town and the improvement of the warm springs "for the public use and benefit," since it was his object to provide healthful convalescent quarters to soldiers wounded in the Revolutionary War. These records likewise show that he was a frequent visitor here and that he owned property in the town. Thus, in October, 1776, the General Assembly of Virginia established the "Town of Bath" to encourage the use of the springs for those seeking to recover their health.



Feast on Plums.

Hikers who do not plan to go to Berkeley Springs will meet in front of The Post Building at 9:45 a. m. for a trip to Villa Ecuador and the fine beach at River Bend camp. The round-trip fare will be 55 cents and reservations must be made in advance at National 4200. Antonio Vega, leader of this trip, invites everyone to a feast of plums, blackberries and gooseberries near his summer cottage at Villa Ecuador. The route follows Locker Branch to the Potomac, thence along the riverside trail to River Bend camp for a swim. The river at this point is fairly clear and uniformly about 4 feet deep with a sandy bottom. Boats and canoes are available there for short trips to several islands in the Potomac River.

The return trip along a different route traverses cool woods. This trail was recently cleared and is easy going. The total walking distance is 4 miles and several hours of the afternoon will be devoted to swimming and a water ball game between two teams. Bring along your swim suit, lunch, cup and a rubber ball, if you have one. Hikers who fail to phone in reservations show poor sportsmanship in inconveniencing and delaying the other hikers.

Returns to Japan.

Frederick, Md., July 18 (AP).—Otis W. Rhoades, American vice consul at Kobe, Japan, who had been visiting his mother, Mrs. Charles M. Rhoades, here, has left for San Francisco. He will sail July 26 for Kobe. Rhoades, a native of Frederick, was spending his first vacation in this country in four years.

Newsom Holds Chisox to 8 Hits as Nats Win Opener, 6 to 4

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

My Idea of Nothing at All.

A PITCHER inspecting the nail on his middle finger after throwing a three-base hit to Jimmy Foxx. It's the old alibi stuff.

—A golfer nonchalantly reclining on the green at full length as his opponent steps up to putt. It's a cheap trick to disconcert him.

POVICH.

—A tennis player purposely netting a ball to even the score after what he thinks was a tough decision given his opponent by the linesman. It serves only to show up the official.

—A football player making a flying dive at a defense man long after the play has been stopped 20 yards away. It's a grandstand gesture and no good man was ever taken out of a play that way, anyway.

—A fancy-diving judge solemnly deliberating whether to give a diver 975 or 980 points on a jack-knife and half-twist attempt. It's like attempting to split a hair with a rolling pin.

—A fighter grabbing the top ropes with his hands and going into a little dance in his corner before the referee calls 'em out for the first round. It's gallery stuff, and he knows it.

—A wrestling referee giving instructions to the two actors before the start of the bout. It's a laugh. He has probably been given his instructions by the wrestlers long before that.

—A race horse owner hustling to the judges' stand to be photographed receiving a replica of the King's Plate, or something. He probably doesn't know the sire of his horse or the name of the jockey; hasn't spoken to the trainer in months, and probably doesn't know a blood line from a clothes line.

—A star high jumper who keeps his long sweat pants over his trunks until he has outjumped everybody in the field and then takes 'em off to try for a new record. It's pure conceit and an unkind attempt to show up his opposition.

—A boat lead of regatta officials wearing commodore caps. The closest they probably ever got to salt water was a gargle solution and most of 'em wouldn't know a marlin spike from a hangnail.

—A pitcher who knows he's due to face Tommy Bridges or Mel Harder that afternoon and suddenly turning up with a sore arm. One of these days he'll beg off because of pink tooth brush.

— A radio announcer giving a play-by-play account of a ball game and who interjects, "It would be nice if Joe Whoozis makes a three-base hit already and the announcer probably will take credit for predicting it.

—A guy who gets in the elevator with you, mops his brow, and asks: "Is it hot enough for you?" He knows damn well it is and so do you. base hit here with the bases loaded." Joe Whoozis has probably made His idea of a snappy come-back is probably, "Oh, yeah?" or, possibly, "Izzatso?" He's the same guy who asks the newly-wed, coyly: "How yuh like married life?"

—A quarter back calling his own signal to carry the ball after the full back has bucked it all the way down the field to the 1-yard line. In later life, he'll give you the shirt off his back—if it itches.

—A baseball manager whose team is 25 games out of the lead telling the press that he hasn't given up hope for the pennant yet. He knows he'd be called on the carpet by the boss if he dared to tell the truth.

—A ball player who has just hit a home run tipping his hat to the crowd after he crosses the plate. It's the hokum. He knows that the same crowd would have booed him if he had struck out.

—A boob driving into you from the tee before you've played your second shot and then telling you that he was sorry because he didn't think he could drive that far. His sudden modesty is the better part of valor and also the bunk.

—A certain District Commissioner traveling to every society horse show and hunt meet that he can make. He's the same guy who turned thumbs down on legalized racing in the District of Columbia.

Savoldi Kicks Sonnenberg, Wins Bout

JOE SAVOLDI, former Notre Dame full back, drop-kicked himself a couple of octaves higher in the wrestling scale last night, when he floored Gus Sonnenberg, former world champion, at the end of the first half-hour of their scheduled two-hour match at Griffith Stadium.

Savoldi recovered himself from an attack of what looked like shaking palsy as the result of a series of Sonnenberg football charges to spring off the floor and land both feet squarely on the Sonnenberg jaw. He didn't have to administer the body press which followed, for Gus was out like a lark, if his three-minute horizontal rest on the canvas meant anything.

The match was another build-up for the coming Savoldi-Dan O'Mahoney match, although Fred Mazurki, able former Fordham football star, formally challenged the winner at the opening of the match. A crowd of 5,000 witnessed the card, which opened with Rube Wright defeating Bill Middlekauf in 19 minutes, followed by Irish Jack Donovan and Ed Meske, the latter from Akron, Ohio, wrestling to a draw. Mazurki threw 315-pound Tor Johansen in 10½ minutes. Mazurki weighed 222.

Buddy Baer, Down, Rises to Stop Foe

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 18.—Buddy Baer, giant younger brother of the former heavyweight champion, rallied from a first-round no count knockdown tonight to gain a knockout victory over Al Delaney, aspiring Cleveland heavyweight, in 34 seconds of the fourth round. Baer weighed 236½, and Delaney 190.

Delaney, only 19 and 3 inches shorter than the 6 feet 4 inches of his opponent, showed a surprising flurry in the first round and sent Baer to his knees with a left for no count soon after the first bell.

Buddy appeared bewildered, flailing away with both hands until he struck Delaney a low blow, giving the round to the Clevelander despite the fact he was knocked for a nine count shortly before the bell. Delaney took a ten count on the floor but was allowed to continue.

Young Baer, gaining confidence, floored Delaney twice in the third round and administered the finishing wallop 34 seconds after the fourth round opened.

Silas Is Winner Over Rock In Upset

SID SILAS, Washington welterweight, scored a sensational upset over Tony Rock, of Scranton, in a ten-round feature at the American Legion Arena last night. Silas rose from the canvas after being floored in the first round to weather a terrific two-fisted barrage. He gain a unanimous decision.

On The Post scoresheet Rock was not credited with a single round after the first. The tenth was even, Silas took the other eight by narrow margins. The bout was witnessed by 700 people.

Henry (Pop 'em Over) Irving, of Washington, and Mickey Flanagan, Pittsburgh, battled to stalemate in a blood and thunder six-round middleweight preliminary. First Mickey, then Henry, would seem on the verge of signing off for the evening, but they managed to stay right side up to the finish to a dead heat.

Lawrence Lunn, Baltimore bantamweight, fighting under the nom de guerre of Pat Moore, won a unanimous decision from Sam Seaman, of Alexandria. The affair was give and take all the way, with the winner doing most of the giving, as Seaman concentrated on the taking.

A colored lad with the poetic name of King Dingle scored a fourth round technical knockout over one Pat Grady, also colored.

Bluege Gives Hurler Fine Support

Two Chicago Pitchers Pounded for Total of 13 Blows.

Kuhel's Triple Brings Lead, Threatened Only Once.

By Shirley Povich.

THE White Sox were never able to get a toe hold on Buck Newsom's pitching yesterday. They plodded along, picking up a single run in four different innings, but the Nats had built up a nice reserve and won the ball game, 6 to 4.

For Washington it was not only its second straight victory, one shy of their record streak of the season, but a happy reunion between the Nats' high-geared batting attack and some decent Washington pitching, which had been estranged for lo, these many weeks.

While the Nats were pummeling Les Tietje and his succesor, bespectacled John Salveson, for 13 happily timed hits, Big Newsom was seeing to it that their lead was not being wasted. He held the White Sox to eight hits and when the demands of the occasion called for some extra fine pitching, he supplied it.

The third-place White Sox, fresh from an even break with the Yankees, were by no means passive. They nicked Newsom for a run in the fourth inning to cut his lead to 2-1, and after the Nats had boosted the figures to 5-1, they nudged Newsom around for single runs in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings to cut his advantage to 5-4.

Newsom There in Pinches.

But Newsom each time frustrated the Sox on the brink of a cluster of Chicago runs. The first two batters reached base against him in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings, but when a damaging hit was needed by the White Sox, there was no hit forthcoming against Newsom.

Ossie Bluege was no drawback to Newsom out there at shortstop. The veteran Bluege roamed all over the left side of the infield, throwing out seven hitters in his copyrighted style, and the guys he robbed of hits would form a good-sized crowd.

The Nats lost a run in the first inning when Buddy Myer, troubled by a sore toe, was thrown out at the plate on his attempt to score on Manush's double to left field, but they instituted proceedings against Tietje in the third inning.

Bluege's single and Joe Kuhel's healthy triple over Al Simmons' head established them in a 2-0 lead and it was 5-1 in the fourth with the help of Appling's muff, which put Manush on first base. Powell beat out a bunt to Tietje, Bluege slapped a long triple to center field and Newsom himself drove in the third run of the inning with a single to center.

Sox Score Twice.

The Sox meanwhile had picked up a run in the fourth on Bonura's double and after Sewell and Pinch-Hitter Conlon had led off the fifth with walks, they scored a second run with the aid of three outs. It was 5-3 after the sixth when Bonura and Simmons led off with hits and Bonura eventually scored on an infield out, and in the seventh when Tietje led off with a single and Radcliffe doubled against the right-field wall. Newsom confined the uprising to one run, which cut his lead to 5-4.

The Nats came back against Salveson to give Newsom another run to work with in the seventh when Travis' single scored Stone from second, but that run was superfluous.

Chicago put only one man on base against Newsom in the last two innings, and that with two out in the ninth. Big Buck sealed his victory with a flourish when he struck out Piet on a third strike the Chicago second baseman missed by, conservatively, a half foot.

White Sox Argue in Vain With Umpire Bill Dinneen

Protesting the umpire's ruling which permitted Joe Kuhel a three-ba se hit in fourth inning yesterday, the White Sox infield clustered about Umpire Bill Dineen and delayed the game for 5 minutes. After rounding second base on his long hit to center field, Kuhel crashed into Second Baseman Tony Piet and fell to the ground. Dineen ruled it interference by Piet and sent Kuhel to third. Browns Down Yanks, 4-1, In 11th

Ruffing Weakens After Pitching 5-Hit Ball for 10 Innings.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Charley Ruffing weakened after pitching five-hit ball for ten innings today and Pat Malone proved a "bust" as a relief hurler and the Browns scored three runs in the eleventh to defeat the Yankees, 4 to 1. The loss cut the Yanks' lead over Detroit to 1½ games.

Sam West's homer enabled the Browns to go into extra innings after the Yanks had scored their only run off Dick Coffman in the first. In the eleventh West broke the tie with a single behind base hits by Julius Solters and Ed Coleman. Ruffing loaded the bases with a pass, then Malone came in to walk Harland Clift and Johnny Burnett to force in two more runs. Red Rolfe's triple and Ben Chapman's single brought the Yankee run.

Win After Tying Score With Two in 9th.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 18.—The Giants escaped from Redland with their league-leading laurels badly tattered today after struggling through 12 long innings and more than three hours to defeat the Reds, 5 to 3, and gain an even break in the four-game series. By winning the overtime struggle, the New Yorkers remained four games ahead of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Reds, after taking the lead when Ernie Lombardi's home run touched off a two-run spurt in the seventh, kicked the game away in the ninth when a pair of errors let the Giants score twice and tie the score. The league leaders finally did some real hitting against Relief Hurler Don Brennan to win.

Tigers Blank Boston, Gain Game on Yanks

Rowe Stars in Box and at Plate as Ferrell Is Conquered.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 18.—Only one of the Red Sox reached second base today when Schoolboy Rowe pitched and slugged Detroit to an 8-to-0 shutout. By their triumph, the Tigers gained a full game on New York.

In gaining his first victory of the Tigers' current Eastern swing, which was his ninth of the season, Rowe held the Red Sox to five singles. Ossie Mellillo was the only Bostonian to touch the second sack and he had to wait until the ninth to do so. He singled to left in that frame and advanced to second when Rowe missed a throw-in from the outfield.

The Tigers belted Wes Ferrell, seeking his fifteenth triumph, for eight hits and Rowe got three of them, a pair of singles and a triple.

Off to Early Start.

The three-bagger, coming in the second with Fox and Owen on base, sent the Tigers off to a flying start. Rowe scored the third run after White poled out a long fly.

A base on balls and singles by White and Greenberg gave the Tigers two more tallies in the fifth and they put on another three-run rally in the ninth, which Rowe started with his second single. Ferrell passed the next two batters to fill the bases and Rowe scored when Manager Joe Cronin messed up Greenberg's hard-hit grounder. Goslin then cleaned the sacks with a single to center.

London, July 18.—Hurrying home "because Freddie will be furious," Mrs. Helen Wills Moody sailed for home on the George Washington today still undecided whether she will compete in the Wightman Cup matches and national championships at Forest Hills, N. Y., next month.

"I honestly haven't decided," she told the Associated Press as she caught the boat train at Victoria Station after a ten-day "hide-out" from interviewers since her triumphant comeback at Wimbledon in the all-England championships.

"Right now I'm just anxious to get back to San Francisco as quick as possible because I've already stayed an extra week and Freddie will be furious."

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—The Philadelphia Athletics climbed to within 3½ games of fifth place in the American League by beating the Cleveland Indians, 7 to 5, in the opening clash of a four-game series today.

Higgins' first homer came in the fourth with Jimmy Foxx on base. Johnny Marcum, who lasted the distance for the victors, allowed only two hits over the first six innings.

Caddies at Cox's Former Links Go on Strike for Pay Increase

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Social unrest entered the pleasant world of golf in a big way when discontented caddies at Dyer Park, Brooklyn, today threatened a city-wide strike and a caddies' union, in their battle for a 25-cent per 18 holes raise.

At the same time, Park Commissioner Robert Moses attempted to swing a big stick by declaring that the 250 Dyker Park strikers would be discharged if they didn't return to work by noon tomorrow. This ultimatum produced a tempest among caddies and precipitated another walkout, this one at the Clearview course, Bayside.

Fourteenth-street-on-the-greens had a spokesman in James Driscoll, of Brooklyn, a Dyker Park delegate. He said that unless Moses agreed to raise the scale from 75 cents to $1 for 18 holes, he and his cracker-box pals would induce 2,000 caddies in the city's ten municipal courses to walk out in a united front offensive.

Park-and-Playground Moses, in the unexpected role of labor mediator, vowed that his to-work order spoke for itself. Attaches of his office said they "don't care what happens to the caddies—the order is intended to end the strike." About 4,000 golfers a day use city courses, half employing caddies.

The young club-carriers complain that they often earn only 75 cents a day, awaiting a job on the crowded courses.

Thirty-five professional bag-toters, ranging in age from 36 to 45 were fired today at the Essex County Country Club at West Orange, N. J. The caddy master there thought age was slowing them up and added that some of them reported for work with liquor on their breath.

Girl, 11, Steals Diving Show In Victory

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The big and the little of it—husky Lenore Kight, of Homestead, Pa., and tiny 11-year-old Mary Hoerger, of Miami Beach, Fla.—ran off with the show today in the opening performance of the four-day national women's swimming championships at Manhattan Beach.

Miss Kight, queen of the distance mermaids, opened the defense of her three national titles by setting up a new American record of 24 minutes 20.4 seconds for the mile, and giving every indication that she will do more time slashing when she gets around to the half and quarter mile fields she rules.

The baby member of the cast, 74-pound Mary Hoerger, flipped off the 3 meters springboard with such ease, confidence and agility that she completely won the hearts of 5,000 spectators and the points of six judges, to capture the event and become the youngest national champion in the history of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Miss McKean Wins.

Olive McKean, long-armed, lanky sprinter from Seattle, Wash., opened the title day by winning the 100 meters free style for the second straight year in 1 minute 10.2 seconds, considerable over Helene Madison's mark of 1 minute 6.8, set in Los Angeles in 1932. Miss McLean had little difficulty catching Katherine Rawls, Miami Beach star, in the last 50 meters, to win by about 4 feet, with Mary Lou Petty, of Seattle, third, and Miss Kight, fourth.

Aside from the time element of the record performance, there was little excitement in the runaway mile of Miss Kight, 23 years old and a husky 157-pounder. Her lead over Susan Robertson, of New York, was almost two lengths of the 50-meter pool at the finish, with Evelyn Rawls, sister of Katherine, third.

Consistently Good.

Little Miss Hoerger, who finished third in both of the last two national diving championships, was consistently good on all the required and the more difficult optional dives.

She scored a total of 128.59 points, just enough to beat her closest rival, Janice Lifson, of New York, who had 127.80, by less than a point. Mrs. Dorothy Poynton Hill, high-board champion, finished third in the field of 11 with 125.93 points.

It was all very thrilling to the stub-nosed youngster, but it never did faze her. Asked her ambition after the crowd had roared their approval of the judges' verdict, she said demurely:

Upsets Oust Eaton and Goodman

Moreland and Goldman Win, 5 and 3 and 2 Up, Respectively.

Yates and Bliss Among Survivors in Western Open Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 18. Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, Nebr., and defending Champion Zell Eaton, of Oklahoma City, were blasted into the discard of the Western Amateur Golf tournament late today as Rodney Bliss, of Omaha, the medalist led the way into the 36-hole quarter-finals.

Goodman, Transmississippi champion and former United States Open title holder, was checked out by faulty putting on the back nine of his second-round match and the sub-par rally staged by his opponent, Dave Goldman, of Dallas, Tex.

The Omahan 3-putted the twelfth hole from 12 feet and needed three blows again on the fifteenth green. Settling down from a 3-over-par 38 going out, Goldman beat par by a stroke coming in and finished 2 up on Goodman with a birdie 3 on the home green, where he planted his iron second 5 feet from the pin.

Pars First Nine.

Recovering from a hard struggle through the first round this morning when he beat Dave Connell, of Raton, N. Mex., an outside qualifier, by only one up, Goodman parred the first nine against Goldman and was one up at the turn.

Eaton was side-tracked, 5 and 3, this afternoon by Gus Moreland, the former Texan now hailing from Peoria, Ill.

Eaton's game, troubled by wind and misjudgment of deceptive mountain distances, fell apart this afternoon after he breezed through the 18-hole first round with a 5-and-4 triumph over Nathan Grimes, of Denver.

The 22-year-old ousted champion was 3 under par when he closed out Grimes, but he never got on his game against Moreland, 1932 Western champion and former Walker Cup player.

Moreland fired three birdies at Eaton, Oklahoma City youth, coming in after making the turn, one up. Both played indifferent golf going out, Moreland carding 38 and Eaton, 40.

Poor Work on Greens.

Moreland, who barely escaped elimination in the first round this morning, winning from Bob Conliff, jr., of Oklahoma City, Okla., on the nineteenth hole, settled back in stride. His poor work on the greens was offset by brilliant shots from the tees and fairways. He 3-putted four greens.

Rippy Plays 33 Holes in 2 Under Par in Drill for U. S. Event

Youth Cards Fine 69 on First 18

CLAUDE RIPPY, 22-year-old District public links golf champion, who will captain Washington's Harding Cup team in the National championship at Indianapolis July 29 to August 3, inclusive, shot a 69, 2 under par, yesterday at Indian Spring Country Club for one of the lowest rounds of the season over the lengthy and considerably stiffened Four Corners course.

The municipal star showed some of the old faithful at Indian Spring—Sam Rice, reformed ball player; Volney Burnett and Harry Peacock—what he plans to do in the national event.

Nine Straight Pars.

Not over on a single hole, Rippy reeled off nine straight pars on the first nine, and picked up birdies on the thirteenth and fifteenth to negotiate the back nine in 34.

Indian Spring has been toughened for the forthcoming National Amateur sectional trials, and the rough is simply terrific. Rippy, however, fired his shots like a Tennessee rifleman, and didn't have to worry about the rough.

Late in the evening he played 18 more holes with Al Houghton and Dr. Larry Otell, and shot the first nine in 34, 1 under par. He fired 4-4-4-4, even par for the next four, jumped over to the seventeenth, and scored a birdie deuce, and finished with a 5. For the 33 holes, Rippy was 2 under par.

His card:

Rippy	4	4	4	4	3	4	4	5	3	—35
In—par	4	4	4	3	4	5	4	4	4	—36—71
Rippy	4	4	4	3	4	5	4	4	4	—34—69

Over at Congressional Country Club Claggett Stevens, assistant pro, released a withering barrage of pars and birdies and burned up his course in 69 shots, three under par. Stevens had 35-34, making birdies on the fourth, fifth, thirteenth and eighteenth. One mistake on the short fifteenth cost him a four.

Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, who shot a 69 over his home course Wednesday, took 75 blows; W. R. Stone, 85, and Russ Hardy, 90. They were his playing companions.

Out	5	4	3	3	4	4	5	5	3	—35
In	4	4	3	4	4	4	4	4	3	—34—69

Al Houghton holed out a 150-yard shot from the rough for an eagle 3 on the 460-yard seventh at Indian Spring Wednesday. Such shots are rare in the life of Houghton, who has never even made an ace.

Houghton yesterday received a letter from George Jacobus, president of the National P. G. A., in which he said he would take under advisement Houghton's plans to book the British and American Ryder Cup teams for a match at Indian Spring.

Three Homers Aid Cubs In Downing Phils, 11-3

Chicago, July 18 (AP).—A barrage of extra-base hits that included homers by Chuck Klein, Frank Demaree and Stan Hack, a triple by Gabby Hartnett and a double with the bases filled by Billy Herman gave the Cubs an 11-to-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies today and an even break in the four-game series.

The Phillies knocked out Roy Henshaw for the second time in the series in the fifth inning when they narrowed the Cubs' early lead to 4 to 3 by scoring two runs, including a homer by Lou Chiozza, but the veteran Charley Root stepped in to check them with two hits in the last four and one-third innings.

Garden's Tankmen Face Navy Sextet

To Clash With Middies at Annapolis Tomorrow.

The Maryland Club Gardens water polo teams, Washington's hope to win the National Junior championship to be held at the Gardens pool, Saturday and Sunday, July 27 and 28, will meet the Naval Academy sextet tomorrow at Annapolis in something considerably more than a mere warm-up.

Bob Varella, former Syracuse and Duke aquatic star, who led the Gardens to the District A. A. U. title last year, again heads the team. Thornton Burns, former Southern Conference, 440-yard champ for Duke; Dave Tipp, University of Pennsylvania star; Jack Wilton, of Central High; Ralph King, Navy; Monte Jones, Maryland; Henry Renick, Central; John Mayhew, Maryland, and Dave Roadley, Central, also play at Annapolis.

C. C. Va. Faces Big Season On Links

Special Dispatch to The Post.

RICHMOND, July 18.—The Country Club of Virginia golf team, defeated only once in four years of intensive campaigning, this week-end inaugurates its heaviest campaign in history. Charles A. Withers, doughty captain of the crack links aggregation, has lined up matches in Washington, North Carolina and Maryland, as well as contests with other sections of Virginia.

It will be the first time that the Country Club of Virginia team has sought out-of-State opposition.

Three years ago the Chevy Chase team, playing on its own course, nosed out the C. C. Va. team by a margin of 1 point. The Richmonders had not been defeated for a year before that date and they have forgotten how to lose since.

Qualify Thursday.

Thursday afternoon will see the preliminary chapter when qualifying takes place at James River for places on the team in the first match, scheduled against Petersburg here Saturday. Four places will be reserved for juniors, who, however, must also turn in scores good enough to beat seniors for those posts.

The Petersburg match will be a 12-man affair and most of the others scheduled for the remainder of the year will follow suit, Capt. Withers said.

On July 28 the Washington Golf and Country Club team is scheduled here, following the Jimmy Thomson-Sam Parks, jr., exhibition the day before. On August 3 the Richmonders will meet an all-Valley team, composed of the pick of the Lexington, Winchester, Harrisonburg and Staunton golfers.

Matches have been arranged with Chevy Chase and Army and Navy, of Washington, for later in the summer. Durham, N. C., Five Farms of Baltimore, and Lynchburg have been definitely scheduled and there is a possibility that Charlotte, N. C., will be met.

Virginia-Wide Tourney For Nines Is Proposed

Richmond, Va., July 18 (AP).—Plans for a State-wide championship baseball tournament in late August will be perfected at a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce here Tuesday night which will be attended by representatives of teams throughout Virginia.

The Richmond athletic board is sponsoring the tourney, which will include upward of 20 of the State's best teams. All nines not engaged in organization baseball are eligible. Receipts will be pooled and divided on a percentage basis.

Wash. County Poloists Book Ft. Myer Team

Hagerstown, Md., July 18.—The Fort Myer, Va., polo team has scheduled two games with the Washington County polo team, the first game to be played on the Virginians' field August 18. Fort Myer will play at Fenton Field, Williamsport, September 2.

The local team will play the Medical Barracks team at Carlisle, Pa., Sunday.

First-Half Flag To Culpeper Tossers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CULPEPER, Va., July 18.—Culpeper Athletic Club practically put the lid on the remaining seven clubs in the Valley League, by defeating the Charlottesville Athletics here this afternoon in a twin bill by the scores of 10 to 6 and 7 to 3, the latter being a seven inning engagement by agreement.

Culpeper had a margin of one game over Front Royal which was idle today, and with the one game today's double killing placing them two up. Culpeper was leading the Athletics of Charlottesville by three games, today's scores placing them four up over the third-place team.

Two Games to play.

Culpeper and Front Royal each have two games to play to complete the first half of the schedule, and with the same teams, in the second division, Orange and Staunton. Unless the unforeseen happens, it is almost an assurance that Culpeper, champion of the Valley League in 1934, will remain on top for the first half.

The first game saw five twirlers on the mound, two for Charlottesville and three for Culpeper. The visiting twirlers were touched for 14 hits in the first contect against 13 for the locals. In the two games each team was credited with eight errors. McIntyre was assigned the pitching duties in the second game and allowed the visitors five hits for a total of three runs.

Orange Noses Out Front Royal, 3-1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orange scored in the first on Louie Utz's fielder's choice and a double by Kessler. The Stars came back in the second to tie the count on three successive hits. The second local run followed a walk, passed ball and a single, and the last came as the result of Mundy's double in the seventh, Roos' infield hit and a passed ball.

Sophie Tucker Seeks Braves, Would Let Ruth Direct Club; 'Not for Sale,' Fuchs Replies

By the United Press.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 18.—Sophie Tucker, veteran "red hot mamma" and blues singer, announced tonight that she has opened negotiations with President Emil Fuchs of the Boston Braves, hoping to purchase the beleagured club and "put it back on its feet."

"And if I take over the club," continued the plump old trouper, hitching up her blue slacks, "I'll go right after Babe Ruth and have him as my right-hand man in operating the Braves. The Babe and I have been friends for years—and he's too good a fellow to be getting kicked around the way he is."

"Listen!" she almost shouted. "I've been trouping up and down the country, starring on Broadway and in Europe for more than 20 years. I admit 20 years. And never yet have I put over a press agent stunt. I don't have to. Why, everyone calls me "the public's sweetheart No. 1,' right now. I don't need publicity."

Interviewed in her hotel room, Sophie explained that her attorney, A. A. Berman, of New York, had written a long letter to Judge Fuchs today, requesting a detailed statement on the club's financial situation, and what terms Fuch's and his associates would consider in selling.

"If Judge Fuchs makes me a fair offer, or is reasonable in his reply, I will go to Boston immediately and try to swing the deal as soon as possible. I would like nothing better than to own or have a large interest in the Braves—because I have followed them for years, and they are my home town club."

But did Miss Tucker realize that the purchase of a major league ball club like the Braves would necessitate an investment approaching $1,000,000? Yes—Miss Tucker had realized that fully.

Is Miss Tucker a millionaire?

"Now, don't be so stupid as to ask me a question like that—and don't ask me my age," said Sophisticated Sophie. "As far as money is concerned, I have quite a bit of my own. And I have many friends who are wealthy—friends who would be delighted to go in with me on the Braves proposition, if I needed assistance."

If Sophie took over the Braves, would she apply any new methods in operating a ball club?

"Well, I should say I would. I'd apply showmanship to baseball. I think every club in the majors could use a lot of more showmanship. Say—I'd put over the Braves just like I've put over all my acts—just like I'm putting over my new song, 'Life Begins at Forty.' I'd put the Braves over in a big way."

The torch singer said she had become interested in the financial plight of the Braves after reading repeated stories of their difficulties in the newspapers. Fuchs and his Boston club were so embroiled at the close of last season that the National League was forced to guarantee payment of their rent on Braves Field for 1935—to prevent the field from being used as a dog track.

Ruth shifted from the Yankees to the Braves as player and official, but he left in a huff about six weeks ago. At that time Fuchs announced he would consider any good proposition to sell. Since then the opulent O'Malley family of Boston and Joe E. Brown, the movie comedian, have been dickering with Fuchs. But their negotiations are understood to have fallen through.

Boston, July 18 (U.P.).—The Boston Braves are not for sale—not to Sophie Tucker, Club President Emil Fuchs said tonight.

"I received a letter from Miss Tucker's attorney, A. A. Berman," said Fuchs at his Jamaica home, "and I immediately got in touch with him by telephone at New York and told him:

"The Braves are not for sale."

"I further told him," said Fuchs, "that there have been too many persons trying to cash in on the publicity incident to the contemplated sale of the club, and please not to bother me again."

Fuchs said his telephone talk with Berman was the end of the Tucker-Fuchs negotiations. He had no intention of furnishing the blues singer the financial data requested in her attorney's letter.

Fuchs said there were no developments in "legitimate" negotiations for purchase of the Braves.

Oliveri Takes Municipal Golf Title

The stocky little fellow, who whacks 'em a mile off the tee and putts his opponents to death, defeated another chap of his own age, Alfred Shorb, 1-up in the 18-hole finals.

Oliveri served notice in his morning semifinals match that he was at the peak of his game when he rapped out an even par 36-34—70 to crush another favorite, Bob Leapley, 6 and 5.

Morris Good, Too.

Surprise package of the tournament, virtually unknown in municipal golf until he bowled over a couple of the better known players, Shorb, a protege of Lionel Walker, former Army and Navy Country Club pro, scored a 72 in eliminating Bob Morris, 3 and 2, in his semi-finals match.

Oliveri was forced to summon to his aid all his cunning and knowledge of pitch shots and putts before putting away Shorb, who overcame Oliveri's early one-hole lead to take command of a three up margin at the turn. Shorb won the fifth when Oliveri three-putted; the sixth when Oliveri stymied himself on the green; the eighth, thanks to a beautiful chip that finished a few feet from the pin, and sank a 10-footer for par and the hole on the ninth.

Rallies Coming In.

Sensing possible defeat, Oliveri settled down on the back nine and fired a 35, one over par, while Shorb lost his touch with the irons and took 40 strokes. Oliveri was dead with his approach for a 4 on the tenth and won the hole, but lost the twelfth when Shorb canned a 10-footer for a birdie. Oliveri sank a 15-footer for a 3 and the hole on the thirteenth and captured the fourteenth with a par 3 when Shorb's drive got tangled up in the trees.

Again on the fifteenth Oliveri approached stone dead and took a 4 to square the match. Oliveri nailed an 8-footer for his par 4½ on the sixteenth, and scored his margin of victory on the seventeenth, a 174-yarder. Here Shorb went to pieces. He topped hi drive, was in the rough with his second and took a 5, while Oliveri, short in 1, pitched to within 3 feet of the pin, and canned his putt. They halved the eighteenth in 4s, as Oliveri's putt for a birdie from 15 feet lipped the cup. Oliveri had six one-putt greens on the back nine—12 in all for that side.

Dodgers Beat Bucs, 5-3, Sweep 4-Game Series

Pittsburgh, July 18 (AP).—The Dodgers made a clean sweep of their four-game series here by defeating the Pirates, 5 to 3, today when Ray Benge and Emil Leonard combined to hold the Bucs to six hits.

Cy Blanton, Pirate ace, was belted out in the sixth after the Dodgers had scored all their runs off his delivery in two innings.

Philadelphians Lead N. A. A. Regatta

Win Six of Ten Events as Oarsmen Open Meet at Princeton, N. J.

By the United Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 18.—Philadelphia oarsmen thoroughly dominated the waters of Lake Carnegie today as the 100-odd sweep swingers of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen opened their sixty-third annual regatta.

Ten times the starter sent shells on mile-and-quarter dashes down the placid lake, and on six occasions it was a Philadelphia shell that first sliced between the big white flags of the finish line.

Wins Single Sculls.

The association single scull heats went to Charles Campbell, of the Argonaut Rowing Club of Toronto, and his hottest rival, John F. Coulson. Campbell and Coulson, along with Henry Bugbee, of Princeton, and Daniel Barrow, of the Penn A. C., will meet in the final tomorrow. The winner will qualify for the American championship final and the big Gold Challenge Cup on Saturday.

The individual star of the day was Walter Pfaumer, of Philadelphia Bachelors Barge Club, who won both the junior and intermediate single sculls.

The junior quadruple shells title went to the Potomac Boat Club of Washington, with the Crescents, of Philadelphia, the only other entrant, a poor second. The Washington crew used a borrowed boat.

Sixth Regatta Opens Today At Havre

Orme, of Washington, Is Among Entrants in Annual Races.

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE De GRACE, Md., July 18. — Two additional speed boat events today were put on the program of the sixth annual Havre De Grace Yacht Club regatta, starting tomorrow on the upper Chesapeake Bay off Havre De Grace.

The two races—for 91 cubic inch displacement inboards and class M outboards — will be run Saturday along with the finals in the 135-cubic inch displacement classes and classes A, B, C, D, E and F for outboards.

Entrants for the 225-cubic inch event are Andy Crawford, of Washington, with Ednandy; Thomas Mikulski, of Baltimore, with Miss Audrey, and Auerbach, with Emancipator II.

Mt. Jackson Tops Woodstock, 4 to 3

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., July 18.—Mount Jackson defeated Woodstock today, 4 to 3. Woodstock scored two runs in the second after the league leaders had tallied one in the first, and held the lead for eight innings, when the Mount Jackson team scored two runs by virtue of a walk and two base blows.

Champions Arriving for North-South Skeet Shoot Here

Event Opens Tomorrow At Club

Men, Women, Juniors to Vie for Honors in Two-Day Battle.

THE foremost men and women marksmen in the East will converge on Washington today for the annual North-South skeet shoot opening tomorrow at the National Capital Skeet Club and continuing through Sunday.

President Larry Williams of the local club anticipated last night an entry list for the men's event alone of more than 100. Numbering most of the State and city champions of the East from Boston to Atlanta, the field will bang into action at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

At 2 p. m. the women's Open also is slated to start, with the Junior championship following an hour later, to be run simultaneously with the most colorful event of the meet, the 410-gauge championship for men.

Champions to Compete.

Among those fighting for the women's crown will be the National champion, Anna Vance, of Boston, also holder of the Massachusetts State title as well, and Winifred Haley, Connecticut champion, well-known to Washington residents for her shooting with the marksmanship team at Trinity College from which she was graduated two years ago. Mrs. Ernest Klipstein, of East Orange, N. J., New Jersey champion; Abbie Ingalls, of Hot Springs, Va., Virginia champion, and Mrs. William C. Coe, member of the National Capital Club and Maryland champion, are also included in the fast field.

Dr. R. G. Vance, of Boston, member of the all-American skeet team, is the favorite to take the sporty 410-gauge affair, with Dave Sklar, of Brooklyn, another all-American, the choice in the 20-gauge championships starting at 4:30 o'clock. Vance is defending 410-gauge champion.

Mitchell Is Entered.

Gen. Billy Mitchell, of Middleburg, Va., is virtually the only member of the local club figured to finish among the leaders in the open individual championship, starting at 9 a. m. Sunday and running concurrently with the team competition.

In the latter the Roseland, N. J., team, which July 4 set a world's record in a telegraphic match with the Santa Monica, Calif., club, is a heavy favorite to retain its title, with Staunton, Va., conceded only an outside chance of winning, but still the Jersey team's greatest threat.

Frank Kelly and Frank Kraeger, of Roseland, the latter the most prominent skeet shooter in the country, and member of the all-American team for three straight years, rule the favorites with Charles Gillet, of Baltimore, Maryland champion, standing as a dangerous dark horse in the paths of the two Jersey aces.

Turf Club to Hold Golf (?) Tourney

McIntyre, Early Among Sunday Entrants.

Explosion shots from the tee and other weird corruptions of the ancient Scottish game will be witnessed again Sunday morning when the Turf Club, fun-loving group within the National Press Club, holds its annual golf tournament at Indian Spring.

Participating will be three newspaper men high in the councils of the New Deal—Marvin McIntyre and Steve Early, members of the Roosevelt secretariat, and Jesse Jones, Texas publisher and head of the RFC. Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, also is scheduled to play.

The Turf Club tournament is like no other in the land in that a goat-getting kibitzer accompanies each foursome. Members of the club who have not yet registered for the tournament are asked to communicate with Jim North at the National Press Club.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

GO anywhere on Chesapeake Bay this week-end if you are content with a catch of hardheads. You can get them just about any place where you drop your hook.

If you want blues go to Southwest or Northwest Middles, Messick or Kilmarnock, Va., or Ocean City, Md. They are being caught there now in numbers sufficient to content any ethical angler.

For channel bass and weaks head for Wachapreague and tell your boatman to anchor you in the surf off Cedar or Holly Island. You can catch plenty of weaks in the numerous channels off this popular Virginia fishing village, but for bass you will have to go outside. There should be blues offshore, too, but nobody seems to be fishing for them.

Expect to catch big shark and sting ray if you go to Wachapreague. One District angler landed a 9-foot shark last week. There are no end of smaller ones down there around 4 or 5 feet. They break water and give one a good fight and their flesh isn't bad if you crave seafood. In fact, we enjoy eating them ourselves. Even the sting ray is edible and his flesh a recognized corrective for acid stomach. The Italians and the French eat them and like them. But, lay off that tail of theirs! It has killed heaps of people.

Ocean City is reporting excellent fishing these days and the weather is decent. Blues are plentiful and one is always sure of croakers, weaks, kings and porgies, to say nothing of small sea bass.

Percy Klein, W. T. Agee, George Stevens, Frank Weismiller, H. W. Kendrick and Sam Spurrier, all of Washington, together with Charles Halloway, Mayor of Salisbury, Md., went out with Capt. Selby Carpenter, of the Maud, this week and their catch ran 72 big blues, no end of croakers and a pair of huge shark.

On the same day, Capt. Frank Parsons, skipper of the Katherine, took out Russell Arundel, George Dye and Stanley Snydas, of Washington, and the party garnered in 50 blues, all over the 5-pound mark.

Ocean City these days is attracting no end of Washingtonians. There are plenty of fish down there and if you can't afford to hire a boat you won't have any trouble getting a decent catch in the bay or along the pier. Down at Fox Hill Levels, 15 miles south, you can also catch all the channel bass you want.

Piscatory Personalities.

LORNE W. JOHNSON, of Moline, Ill., is a newcomer to Washington. Someone took him out on the Chesapeake last month and introduced him to the hardhead and he has been hard to find ever since. Anglers will readily recognize his symptoms and his brother Elks need not worry too much when he is not around. The other day he hit Hoopers Island with George Stein and Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams and garnered 290 hardhead. They were all big fish, the smallest running 2½ and the largest almost 5 pounds.

Striped bass are still biting strong down around the mouth of the Potomac. It seems to be no trouble to land 5 to 10 pounders. We also get reports of larger fish and we are wondering how many chaps obey the law about those over 15 pounds.

Black bass are plentiful now in Maryland and Virginia streams. Few anglers are taking advantage of this sport. If you lack data we invite you to give us a ring.

Don't forget to place your reservation now for a boat if you plan to fish this coming week-end. If you can't keep your appointment be sure to telephone and explain. In the last few days we've seen several unnecessary tangles result from boats being tied up for parties who failed to show up.

Shrimp and peeler crabs are still the best bait for all 'round fishing. Most bay spots keep them on hand, but one never knows. Mention bait when you make your boat reservation.

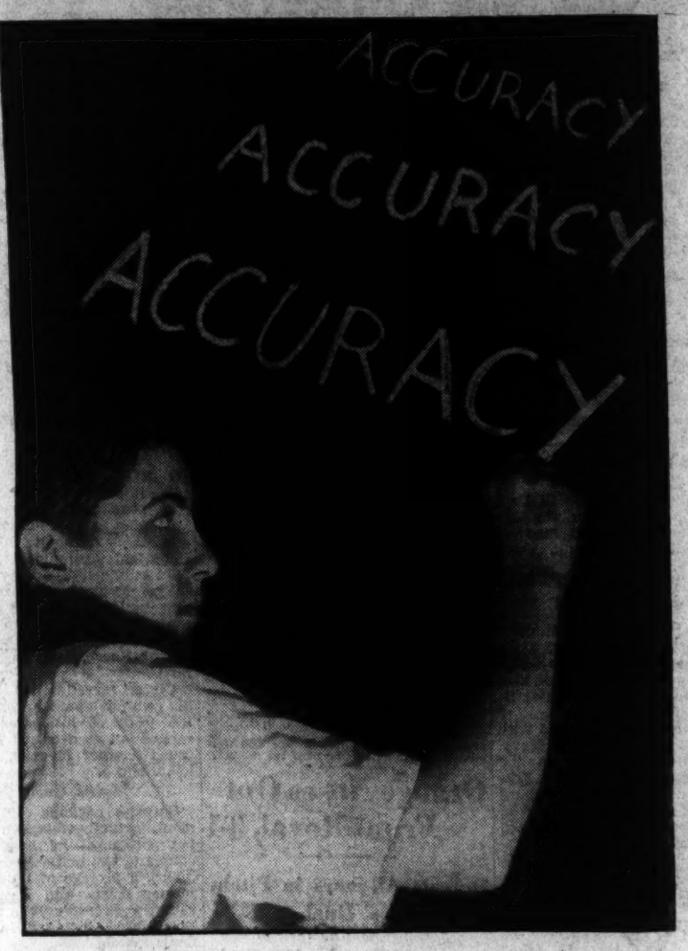
The third of a series concerning Post Carrier Salesmen



Post Carrier Salesman Edwin Swindler, 2875 Woodland drive northwest

BOYS WILL BE MEN

. . . what SORT of men?

HI, YOUNG FELLOW! Ever hear of Joe Pulitzer?

JOE PULITZER was a newspaperman, too . . . the newspaperman, in the eyes of many. And old Joe had one infallible rule for success. He believed in that rule so implicitly that he had it painted on a sign and hung the sign on the walls of the New York World . . . just three words: "Accuracy . . Accuracy . . Accuracy!"

YOU KNOW . . . you're learning Joe Pulitzer's rule. Every day, delivering The Post to your customers, you're accurate above all things. You leave those papers exactly where the customer wants you to leave them . . . you never forget. And we don't need to mention that nearly every reader has his own ideas about the proper place for his morning newspaper!

YOU THINK Joe Pulitzer pinned too much faith to those rules of his? We doubt it. He was a smart man. He knew that the accurate man is the valuable man . . . just as you know that the Post Carrier Salesman who gives his customers accurate service is appreciated by those customers. He's the Carrier Salesman whose pockets jingle.

BECAUSE you've learned to be accurate, you're going to get ahead faster than the other fellow . . . you're building well for a bright future.

Cohort Miss Is Second in Feature

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 18.—Percy M. Pike's Ebony Lady, the 5-year-old daughter of Flying Ebony, today captured the Westport, a mile and 70 yards feature for platers of the classification of $3,000 or better.

Pike's horse won by a nose in a thrilling stretch brush with Cohort Miss that got away from the gate last but closed strong. Ebony Lady negotiated the route in 1:42:2 on a fast oval for a new track record.

Wee Wink set the early pace, although she received contention the full route from the winner and folded badly while turning into the stretch. When she dropped back, Ebony Lady took a strong command and was bravely challenged by Cohort Miss.

Empire City, N. Y., July 18 (AP).—Mrs. L. H. Nimkoff's Legionary, allowed to recede in the betting to 25 to 1, scored a nose victory in the Irvington, a class "C" handicap at a mile and sixteenth, here today. The 4-year-old daughter of Cohort, ridden by the unfashionable B. Wimmer, just lasted to beat W. N. Adrian's consistent Golden Way, upon which Kempton Knott was endeavoring to earn a triple.

C. V. Whitney's Rough Diamond and the Starmount Stable's Brindle followed as named in the blanket finish.

There was booing of the judges' decision, many thinking Golden Way had made the grade on the outside, but it was so close that only the officials were in a position to decide the verdict. Legionary ran the distance in 1:46 3-5. This filly won three races at Jamaica in the spring, but failed in good company at Rockingham in June. She had since been rested up, but the layoff did not dull her speed.

The long-shot filly led from end to end. She made Brown Feathers stop, then held on stubbornly while Brindle and Rough Diamond offered strong opposition. Golden Way circled the leaders and closed fastest of all, heading Rough Diamond for the place. Brindle was a half-length farther back. Frank Ormont showed no speed in the role of an intended good thing.

Schmeling Undecided, Answer Waits a Week

Berlin, July 18 (AP).—Rival New York fight promoters, frenziedly bidding for the services of Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, must spend at least another week on the anxious bench.

Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, now en route home on the liner George Washington, wirlessed the Associated Press today Max has not made up his mind whether he'll fight Max Baer, dethroned champion, or the Negro sensation, Joe Louis, in New York next September.

The latter was a forward factor all the way and held on willingly at the end. TRICKLING worked her way up steadily and closed with good energy in the stretch. YANKEE PRINCE showed good speed, only to falter in the last furlong. BEFITTING was unable to reach serious contention. JOE JAY had early speed.

STE. LOUISE, away well, was kept within striking distance of the pace, swung to the outside when reaching the stretch, closed with a rush and, wearing down the leaders, drew clear at the end. BLACK HIGHBROW, hard ridden from the start, was unable to get to the front in the run to the first turn, was sent up on the outside, overhauled SUN DANCER for the lead when reaching the stretch, but was unable to keep pace with the winner when challenged. SUN DANCER took command at once, was hard ridden and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to keep pace in the stretch drive. LITTLE NYMPH was unable to improve her position under punishment. BLACK HIGHBROW, hard ridden from the start, was unable to get to the front in the run to the first turn, was sent up on the outside, overhauled SUN DANCER for the lead when reaching the stretch, but was unable to keep pace with the winner when challenged. SUN DANCER took command at once, was hard ridden and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to keep pace in the stretch drive. LITTLE NYMPH was unable to improve her position under punishment. Money Doctors In Consultation On Resurgence

By Claude A. Jagger.
Associated Press Financial Editor.

Ithaca, N. Y., July 18.—Prominent players in the Washington drama of the gold dollar met at Cornell University today to pass judgment upon revaluation and to urge further steps to promote recovery.

Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, who resigned as advisor to the United States Treasury nearly two years ago because of disagreement with the monetary policies, said in an address before the annual session of the American Institute of Co-operation he was of the view that we would have made more progress, "if the dollar had not been devalued."

James D. Mooney, president of the American Manufacturer's Export Association, called for an early return to a fixed gold standard, at the present tentative gold basis for the dollar, as a means to restore confidence and revive trade.

Prof. James Harvey Rogers, Yale economist, who remained as economic advisor to the Federal Government during the gold price fixing, although he has intimated that he was not in full agreement with the program, asserted that devaluation had caused disturbing repercussions in much of the world and added:

Farmer Needs Markets.

"It is my opinion therefore, that any monetary measures of the immediate future should be taken with a view to minimizing these very serious obstacles to general recovery. Even the American farmer for whom our gold policy was primarily adopted, now finds himself more in need of foreign markets for his products than a further temporary stimulus to prices."

Earlier in the day, Dr. George F. Warren, of Cornell, who was a dominant figure in Washington as monetary adviser during the gold price fixing of 1933, took issue with Dr. E. W. Kemmerer, international money doctor, who has recently forecast that the cost of living would double as a result of devaluation.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

	Thurs.	Wed.
Advances	388	405
Declines	233	157
Unchanged	167	198
Total issues	788	760

Stocks—More active trading carried stocks to new highs for the year. Bargain hunting investors were held responsible for the good demand in specialty stocks. Large blocks of prominent equities were sold and demonstrated the quest of huge sums of money for profitable work. Sales for the day were 1,517,740 shares.

Bonds—Lack of individual features marked the session. Realizing forced down second-grade rails and other speculative categories. The general upward movement was arrested. Developments affecting investment sentiment were mixed, but had little effect. Federals steered a steady course. Transfers were $9,404,000.

Curb—Late profit taking halted the upward trend of prices. Singer, advancing 10 points more, was the exception. Sales were up to 237,000 shares.

Grains—Large offerings of winter wheat from Ohio carried prices from ⅞ to 1¾ below the previous closes. Corn and oats declined in sympathy. July wheat last at 83⅝ and July corn last at 83⅝.

Cotton—Prices moved within a narrow range and closings were 3 to 6 points lower except for May, which closed a point higher. July last at 11.97.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 18.—Stocks and bonds moved higher, but commodities found the market unsympathetic, partly on less optimism abroad. Stocks continued their broad forward movement, with a turnover at around 1,400,000 shares, heartening everyone in the financial district and increasing the general confidence on a brisk revival in trade this autumn. Bonds also were firm, some new high prices being set in the Government list. September wheat closed 1 cent a bushel lower at 84⅝ cents.

Steel stocks continued to have the call. On all counts a strong forward movement in the steels is the best sort of lead for the market to follow, as prosperity in the steel industry reflects improvement everywhere and, in these times, is particularly significant of recovery in the durable goods industries.

Steel common climbed above 38, or within less than 2 points of the year's best, reached when the operating rate was considerably above what it is now. Bethlehem also was a favorite and the independent steels were somewhat less prominent compared with the leaders. Motors also maintained their front-rank positions. General and Chrysler again were at new high prices. Packard reached up and enjoyed the best turnover. Motor accessories were more selective and less active.

Railroad stocks were firm. Santa Fe and Delaware & Hudson responded readily to moderate buying orders. Rail equipments kept on the sunny side. Brake Shoe, Railway Signal and others pushed forward. American Transport fell a point.

A falling market for wheat and the uncertainties over the AAA seemed to pass by the farm implements and the mail orders. Both sectors made higher prices.

Deflation.

Abroad the news was more favorable. War clouds at least were no thicker. Preparations went forward in France for further tightening of the belt to try to stand enough deflation to balance the budget and stay on gold. French opinion recognizes the cost of avoiding devaluation of the franc; but so far it holds that cost to be less than that of risking inflation. Taxpayers and business will have to suffer, but if meanwhile the cause of general world stability of currencies is promoted, much good will be done. Another outburst of price lifting and inflation in this country would be the final straw for France.

Bank of France cut its discount rate to 3½ per cent, the third reduction from the 6 per cent figure reached in the recent successful effort to stop the drain on French gold. The lower charge will help business, and presumably a final cut to 2½ per cent, the level prevailing before the gold scare, will be made. Just the same, cheapening money rates usually are regarded as a means of promoting some measure of inflation and price rise; whereas the opposite is the current French policy. The same thing is going on in the Netherlands, where the central bank yesterday reduced its discount rate. Bank of France this week added 79,000,000 francs to its gold reserves and circulation dropped heavily.

Francs were up a little today and sterling was a shade lower. Seasonal pressure soon will begin on the pound, but with our trade now running an excess of imports, and with stabilization funds working in greater harmony, the prospect of a sharp movement is not bright.

Congress in session continues to be a drag on business recovery, but as the summer wears on and nothing particularly disastrous happens at Washington, the improved news from industry tends to offset political squirming. At the moment, one important bit of positive legislation which a large section of the financial district had hoped would be passed—namely, amendment to the banking bill to provide for bank underwriting of new securities—looks to have rather a meager chance of action, although sometimes such things come up rapidly from behind.

Better Outlook.

With or without needed changes in the banking laws, the situation is better than it was several weeks ago, when the Eccles banking bill was first proposed. The original measure provided for a radical change in our banking system that was looked upon in nearly all except the radical New Deal quarters as a dangerous departure. The public utility bill still is threatened but its menace to industry in general is far less than that of certain other measures that now look doomed.

What will be the outcome of the AAA under the most recent court decision is problematical, but if it hastens readjustment of agricultural markets to the influences of economic laws, so much the better. The Government soon or late would have had to let farmers see that artificial prices could not be maintained. Meanwhile farmers who fear the dole may be cut off if the processing tax goes, may keep closer to shore on their spending, but that in any event is not the main show of trade recovery. What is needed is larger spending by business, which will increase with every indication of sounder economic and financial policies of Government.

Singer 10 Points Higher on Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 18.—Late profit-taking halted an upward march in curb prices today. Advances of fractions to around a point, however, were in the majority at the close. Transfers approximated 237,000 shares compared with 180,000 the day before.

Principal gains appeared among specialty issues. Singer Manufacturing rose some 10 points on meager dealings. Western Auto Supply, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Parker Rust Proof and Ford Motor of Canada "B" got up 1 to 2. Oils were moderately reactionary, including shares of Humble Oil, International Petroleum and Gulf Oil.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

(This is the thirteenth of a series on foreign civil service and the third on France.)

PATRONAGE in the French public service has dwindled to a narrow field extending only to a small group of posts at the top of the administrative hierarchy, including the directors of departmental divisions, 90 prefects, the minister's personal secretariat, ambassadors and colonial governors.

BAKER.

With the multi-party system in France, making coalitionism inevitable, the public service has never been dominated by spoils politics in the American fashion. A national election rarely means a wholesale overturn in control of government. Between elections, cabinet changes are only partial so far as the partisan makeup of the government is concerned.

However, the old game played by members of Parliament in recommending friends and relatives to the attention of department heads continues, but with little actual effect. Every deputy likes to be able to show his constituents his influence and the results of his benevolent efforts, the popular faith in the efficacy of which is still naive and widespread. How like the game played by our own members of Congress, who have written thousands of letters to every personnel office in Washington, recommending appointment of their constituents!

Patronage in the limited field, as outlined, is also on the decline. Here the practice of appointing career men is growing, and, with the present public service reform and economy wave, patronage is expected to disappear.

Admission to the public service is normally by the route of competitive merit. Only in the realm of promotion and assignment in the lower ranks does intervention by members of Parliament have weight, and that is rapidly diminishing.

According to the commission of inquiry on public service personnel, the central problem in French bureaucracy is not how to eliminate the intrusion of politics, but rather how to discover initially, and then allow full play to, those aptitudes essential to the development of successful administrators.

"Despite much appearance of intrigue and the pervasive influence of camaraderie a la francaise," the commission reports, talent is now the master key to a successful career in the French public service.

. . . Dismissal from the service for political reasons is becoming increasingly rare."

Pre-entrance training in the French public service will be discussed tomorrow.

Two Weather Bureau forecasters have been transferred to the newly organized hurricane warning service in the South. Gordon E. Dunn has been assigned to Jacksonville, Fla., and Welby R. Stevens to New Orleans.

Federal Traffic Club Picnic.

Preparations are complete for the annual outing of the General Accounting Office branch of the Federal Traffic Club, which will be held tomorrow at Bayview Inn, Cedarhurst-on-the-Bay, Md.

The feature will be a soft-ball game between the Passenger Transportation Division and the Freight Transportation Division. A German band is listed on the program.

In charge of the softball game will be: Freight—J. M. Wood, captain, and H. B. Neidfeldt (F), manager. Passenger—F. A. Waters, captain, and Kurt Krause (P), manager. J. J. Mulvey (C), will be the scorekeeper. The following will be umpires: E. E. Enyant, chief; J. J. Paxton, W. S. Stoner and W. H. Forbes.

After the game a picnic luncheon will be served and bathing and boating in the bay will be enjoyed.

Definite plans for housing relief in Washington are expected to be ready early next week, according to Frank Sammons (F), Secretary's Office, Agriculture, who is a leader of the Agriculture Community Planning Association.

Echo on 213 Forum.

"Congratulations upon your articles printed several weeks ago on both sides of Section 213 (marriage clause) of the economy act," writes A. L. (F).

"However," the Federal correspondent continues, "there is one glaring inconsistency that was not mentioned. It is the practice of some offices reappointing wife or husband on a temporary basis who had been forced to resign on account of Section 213. This practice includes cases where the other spouse is employed in the same office, whereas other offices appointed only new employes with a temporary status. Why was it not in order for all offices to hire new people in such instances?"

Parole Group of 'Y' Holds First Meeting

Organization to Work for Larger D. C. Staff.

The first meeting of the parole sub-committee of the Correction committee of the Y. W. C. A. council of social agencies was held yesterday at the Elizabeth Somers House, 1104 H street northwest. Besides Chairman Hugh F. Rivers, the committee includes Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Edith Coulson, Mrs. W. W. Husband, of the Twenty Century Club; Adjutant Gilbert Decker, of the Salvation Army, and Judge James A. Cobb.

The purpose of the sub-committee is to aid the parole board and see that it is provided with an adequate staff. There is, in Washington, only one parole officer for 335 persons on parole. Arrangements for a second officer have already been made. According to the American Association of Social Workers, 50 persons is a maximum for one parole officer to oversee, while 30 is the ideal, it was stated.

Wampler Set Back In Freedom Fight

Federal Judge Albert L. Watson at Scranton, Pa., yesterday directed Thomas M. Wampler, Washington attorney, to file a new habeas corpus petition in his fight to gain liberty from the Federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, the Associated Press reported.

Wampler, who was sentenced to 18 months imprisonment and fined $10,000 for income tax violation, argued his own case. His prison sentence expired last Sunday, but he was not released because he had not payed the fine. Wampler attacked that part of the sentence dealing with the fine.

In his opinion yesterday Judge Watson held that Wampler filed his petition before his prison term had been completed and that he acted prematurely.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Thomas Chatterton, young English boy of the middle eighteenth century, possessed a genius that led to his downfall. He was too young to write the works he claimed he wrote, the critics said—the beauty of his verse could not possibly come from a boy still in his early teens. Chatterton, brooding and unhappy from his rebukes, took his own life when he was 18 years old. What masterpieces he could have produced if kindness and understanding had been shown him, no one can say.

Chatterton was born at Bristol, England, in 1752. At 8, he was sent off to school at Colston where, at the age of 12, he began his writing career. He delighted in poring over ancient manuscripts, and his inspiration seemed to lie in half-forgotten poems of the lives of the fifteenth century. He did a curious thing in his early writing—he penned pieces in antique spelling and phraseology, ascribed them to mythical writers of centuries before, and passed them off as genuine.

His writings showed a rare beauty that place them among the finest in English literature. Some of them he sent to Walpole who, accepting his story that they were from ancient manuscripts just discovered, praised them for their beauty. When Walpole and others discovered that they were modern, and written by a mere boy, they abruptly forgot the beauty of the writings and rebuked the boy for misleading them.

Three months before he was 18 years old, Chatterton retired to his attic room, destroyed whatever of his manuscripts he could find, and committed suicide by arsenic poisoning.

Discovering America

With Maxine Davis

Cracker-Box Sage Is No More—Prophet of Today Runs a Filling Station.

Maxine Davis, magazine and feature writer, has gone forth to discover the America of 1935. She will write of her experiences for The Post. Her ninth article appears today.

Checotah, Okla., July 18.—The David Harum of the general store cracker-box has faded into the limbo of the town crier and the old maid. But his successor, the filling station prophet, carries on.

I listened in here last night, and I learned a lot.

Don't ask me where Checotah is. I waded in through heart-breaking miles of red mud. It's somewhere between Fort Smith, Ark., and Oklahoma City. Evening fell, the birds stilled, the chicks roosted, and an old white horse looked dubiously over a fence as I crawled in and put up at a tourist camp, puritan in appointments, but clean enough to rival any first-class hotel.

The group at the filling station eyed me uncertainly as I joined them. There was the man who owned it, an unshaven but extremely handsome youth; there was, believe it or not, the village blacksmith, a man who'd had three wives "but only one children amongst 'em;" a couple of farmers who, like 77 per cent of their soil-brethren of this State, rent on shares; and a comparatively prosperous looking city merchant, his big car parked, stranded, as I was, by mud.

Fibbing for Sociability's Sake.

They greeted me, as I say, hospitably, but without enthusiasm.

"Are you married, single, or otherwise, ma'am?" inquired the blacksmith.

Something inspired me to—well—inaccuracy.

"Married," I told them. "I'm meeting my husband in Long Beach."

"Any children?"

"Four," I took to lying competently. "All in camp this summer."

The group somehow relaxed. And I knew by that that out here a woman's career is her home. (I don't entirely disagree!)

"What do you think of the President nowadays?" I wanted to know.

"Not so much, lady, not so much," one of the farmers, apparently too poor to get store teeth, answered me. "Last year we had the drouth. This year we got the floods. I guess he ain't so smart, lady . . ."

"And this here relief," chimed in another. "I kin hardly git a man to work. A third of this town is on the relief. They says why work from cock-crow to sun-down when you get more from the relief?"

The gas-dispensing Adonis amplified, "First they sneaks around to the relief place, kind of ashamed of theirselves. Then they see a lot of their friends doing it. Now they drive up, bold as brass!"

For awhile we all brooded on that.

"How come this State is still dry?" I queried. The city traveller gave me the answer to that.

Prohibition Drinking Cheaper.

"We kinda like prohibition in this State," he smiled. "We're used to it. This State came into the Union dry, 26 years ago.

"You can drink cheaper with prohibition. You get anything you want, and there isn't any sales tax on it, like there is on everything else in Oklahoma.

"And we think it's nicer. It keeps drinking in the home. You can get a bottle any place at all, almost, but you can't get a drink.

"We're proud of our corn. Colgate County corn has as good a reputation down here as some imported Scotch where you come from. We all buy it in half-gallon mason jars. You see those jars at the nicest homes, judges and everybody's. Cheap and plentiful and real good."

Well, that's one idea, one way to avoid these soak-the-poor sales taxes that afflict every State I've passed through so far!

Salesman Is Injured.

While trying to board an open-shaft elevator in the Barry-Pate Motor Co. building yesterday, William Jose, 31, 1728 Park road northwest, a salesman for the firm, received a broken leg.

The elevator had started to descend when Jose tried to get on, Emergency Hospital attaches said.

CADILLAC Town Sedan, $267
This is the most unusual used car we have ever advertised and represents the greatest value for the price we have ever seen in a used car. This beautiful, luxurious car formerly owned by an elderly gentleman has been actually driven only 13,759 miles. For the last three years this car has been in storage and has not turned a wheel. The owner turned this car to us at a very low figure and we are willing to give the first buyer who comes out to see it the benefit of this low price. Words can not describe the condition of this car . . . you must see it. Low, long modern lines, beautiful dark green finish, full de luxe equipment includes 6 wire wheels, fender wells, extra-heavy deep-cushioned whip-cord upholstery, arm rests, speaking tube, a motor that is just well broken in. For the buyer who wants a chauffeur-driven town sedan that looks like money in the bank at a full price of only $267 here is the most outstanding bargain in the used car market.

No Bee Control.

("The Senate committee has struck from the administration AAA bill all control of bees as a commodity, following Senator Glass's sharp ridicule."—News item.)

Your goings and your comings won't
Be ruled by Washington;
No marketing agreements will
Be put in gardens fair
To tell you what you mustn't do
And what's illegal there.

II.

Flit busily from plant to plant.
And do just what you will Unworried by restrictions in
Some Democratic bill!
Drink deeply of the garden sweets,
For, queen, you need not shirk
Your tasks for fear a bee may be
Rebuked for too much work.

III.

Make honey as you always have,
Make whoopee in your stride
Unhampered by what Tugwell or
His office may decide.
O, leave the hive whene'er you choose—
Return whene'er you please;
The Senate will not try to make Good Democrats of bees.

IV.

Conduct your love life as you like—
There'll be no rules complex
To regulate a bee's affairs
And deal with things like sex;
Be diligent in hive and field
And rule your golden court
Content with knowing Tugwell can't Demand a full report.

V.

Proceed, oh queen, to build your cell
And neatly spread your wax;
No board from Washington will call
To tell you what it lacks;
As Isaac Watts, the poet, said,
"Improve each shining hour"—
And know that you'll have freedom from
All politicians' power.

VI.

Have all the baby bees you wish,
For Washington won't peg
The birth rate in each little hive
Or tabulate each egg;
Production is your own affair—
It's been decided that
A bee knows more about a bee
Than any Democrat.

VII.

So go your queenly way, ah yes!
And do as you may please
With gratitude to Carter Glass,
A friend, indeed, of bees;
All honey is your life again,
Oh, queen! Hip! Hip! Hooray!
And never will a she bee be Controlled by AAA.

Soldiers who, when they land, are ready for duty.
Soldiers in it? How far will it travel?
Thousands of miles.
Ten...fifty thousand. Easy.
How about landing...it must bounce a few times and...?
It lands very gently. Then can be used as a tank, sausage, and of course, brings the men back.
How long does it take to go...say a thousand miles?
Minutes...seconds. Ah...of course, Colonel, no one but us three must know about this.
No one... no one. Especially no ladies.

On the Air Today

Side slants from the Sunday radio page poll forms:

"The great bane of all advertising programs is iteration and sloganization . . . Mary Livingstone is a better singer than comedienne . . . Why not more musical programs between the hours of 4 and 7 p. m.? . . . The dialogue type of advertising is particularly offensive to me . . . Why is the Tent Show allowed to copy the Show Boat?

"The advertising that goes over best is Ed Wynn's unique variety . . . WOL should replace its news announcers with men who are able to read script effectively . . . I would rather hear good records than bum programs."

• • • •

Those are a small sample of the expressions. The usual plea for less advertising "blow" and "'ballyhoo" is found on at least half the forms received.

Sometimes I wonder whether the objections to treatment of advertising in the big shows are not exaggerated. And then the voice of the listener is heard through just such a medium as this poll and I am inclined to believe that the smart device for selling the sponsor's product has not yet been devised.

• • • •

Fredric March and Merle Oberon will present a scene or two from their forthcoming picture, "The Dark Angel," in Dick Powell's "Hollywood Hotel," WJSV, at 8.

And right there we have one of the most interesting examples of the collective public opinion on a specific show as demonstrated by the poll forms. One listener comments that she is a Powell fan but can't stand the "gurglings" of Louella Parsons.

• • • •

As a matter of record, I feel precisely that way about "Hollywood Hotel." Thus there are two of us, at least. But I also wouldn't give a nickle for an hour of Joe Penner or all the Jack Pearls in captivity.

But the poll brings out the fact that the show business is still being conducted on an even keel. Lots of listeners positively prefer Penner. If the poll proves nothing else, it will settle definitely the diversity of tastes in the entertainment field.

• • • •

Six happy artists will be "graduated" tonight. They are "finds" of the N. B. C. network "Air Breaks" show. Their "diplomas" consist of contracts with the N. B. C. Artists Bureau and when they are heard at WRC, at 8:30, they have achieved a definite goal in radio. All had had professional experience before auditioning for the network "Air Breaks," but none had ever been heard on a network with the exception of Charles Leland, the master of ceremonies.

• • • •

Many thanks to the Rev. William J. Eyles for his expression of appreciation in connection with the eclipse program . . . and also many thanks to WMAL's noontime listeners who have called or written their expressions of interest in "Curbstone Queries." The members of The Post staff who do the sidewalk interviewing have never performed in such a role before in their lives. And the appreciation of the radio audience is acknowledged herewith for them.

• • • •

By the time you have read this, two competitions should have been wound up. Henry Kaufman should have received all the judges' votes on the announcers' contest; and Phil Lampkin should have three candidates for presentation to his WRC audience next Tuesday night in his "get a girl singer" search.

D.C. Employment Office Registration Increases

Increase in applications for employment at the District of Columbia Public Employment Center was announced yesterday by Edgar B. Young, manager. He said there was a slight decrease in positions filled.

The increase was attributed to a new order which requires registration of all employables of emergency relief by the United States Employment Service. In June, 2,530 positions were filled by the center. This represents a slight decrease from May, being purely a seasonal trend, Mr. Young said.

William Duke Killed In Auto Crash in Iowa

William B. Duke, of Washington, was killed yesterday when his automobile struck a bridge abutment near Osage, Iowa. Duke, who was 32, was traveling for a tobacco firm.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Duke, of the Wardman Park Hotel, and four brothers—Capt. James Duke, jr., United States Army; John Duke, of New York; Charles L. Duke, of Savannah, and Daniel S. Duke, of Washington.

10,000 Public Enemies

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

Chapter V.—The Shuttling Bank Robber.

I have previously stated a belief that big crime can not be placed under control in America until it is made unprofitable for all those concerned. The Cherryvale (Kans.) bank case is an excellent example of this. Its ramifications are those of nearly every big robbery, with the exception of the fact that the Cherryvale affair was planned from the inside. Yet even this has its counterpart in many crimes.

Federal officers, through deliberate tracking, established a trail of connivance in the Cherryvale case which covered more than half America. Stolen bonds were recovered in New York, in Chicago, in Boston, in Juarez, old Mexico, and other places. The participants were hunted down and arrested. Yet, when the case came to trial, only the president, cashier and Ford, one of the robbers, were given sentences to the penitentiary. Joe Hamm, a Kansas City cabaret singer, was fined $500 for having disposed of more than $11,000 worth of stolen property—and the rest were acquitted. It all sums up into the plaint of an old police chief:

"After all, you've got to believe in Santa Claus to be in this business. You've always got to think that this is the one time when a jury is going to have some sense and send a guilty man to the penitentiary."

In the final analysis, little was accomplished in the Cherryvale case. Hard-working Federal agents presented their evidence with the meticulous care which only Federal agents possess. The jury elected to look only at the principals. In other words, the machinery of inside bank robberies was left intact.

Nothing was done to the fence. Practically nothing was done to the man who had formed such an important link in the robbery by disposing of stolen property. Nothing was done to the attorney, who, by a bank robber's confession, advised him how to keep away from pursuing officers and sold the loot resulting from a crime. Nothing was done to the persons who had furnished a hideout and a place for the division of the spoils. Nothing was done to the women who waited in a second car, ready to drive it into the path of a pursuing sheriff or posse, if the necessity arose. This sort of thing happens all too often. The American citizen, especially when he gets in a jury box, seems to possess a child-like faith in the theory that all crime is run by a guiding genius, and that if the "brains" of a plot be put in prison, then the problem of law enforcement is solved. The view is idiotic.

Crime Thrives Because It Is Well Organized

Crime thrives because it has a foundation. That is composed of the fences, the bond salesmen, the doctors, the lawyers, the merchants, the automobile salesmen, the women confederates, the hide-out owners, and a hundred and one other forms of a supporting background which lives on crime while crime thrives upon it. Sources of supply and channels of distribution are as necessary in lawbreaking pursuits as in legitimate business. When juries learn to dry them up, crime will dry up. Otherwise, it will only become more widespread. Again, these people are a part of the student body of 300,000,000, perhaps more vicious that the average criminal who is listed as one of the 10,000 because they are so often immune from punishment. And they are an integral part of nationalized law-breaking.

There was a time when crime was a haphazard affair. Then it was a problem of the community. Crooks traveled about only at intevals and held to certain constricted avenues of law infractions. All that has had been changed.

Speedly automobiles and airplanes have widened both the field of acquaintanceship and of activity. The old-time specialization has, to a degree, vanished; a man no longer is a safecracker and nothing else; he is an all-round criminal, and he uses the Nation for his field. True, he may like one sort of work better than another; but let an innovation offer large rewards, and he will be glad to try it. He always knows where he can get help and where he can be hidden.

It is quite true that there were crook hangouts in olden day, and a certain amount of fraternization, but it was a matter of jealously guarded cliques. Denver, Colo., for instance, then was known as the home of confidence men. Kansas City was a hangout for pickpockets. Toledo, Ohio, was called the "peterman' town," where safecrackers gathered. All that has disappeared. There has been a jumbling of trades in the land of the criminal, and underworld counterpart of what might happen if all the lodges and chambers of commerce and fraternal organizations were taken into one big brotherhood.

Thus a crook of any pretensions can operate as well in San Francisco as in his home field of New York—all he needs is a list of names and telephone numbers. The man who pulls a bank robbery in Philadelphia today can sell his stolen securities to a fence in Los Angeles tomorrow, and the murderer from St. Louis can take in a Broadway show that same night. A man may even operate in a State and yet not even take his meals there. The case of Charles Erb Redding proves the point:

There had been a number of bank robberies in Los Angeles, all within a few weeks, with a similarity of procedure in every case. The hold-ups always occurred in branch banks where only a small number of persons were employed. Well dressed, casual, the robber would walk to one of the money windows. There he would move close to the wicket, swiftly point a gun at the teller, and command him in a low tone to push a bundle of currency through the grill. The teller inevitably obeyed; one usually does when looking into the cold muzzle of an automatic.

Robber Vanishes Before Aid Arrives

As soon as he had seized the money, the hold-up man would run from the bank and leap into an automobile conveniently parked, with the motor running. By the time the teller could notify the rest of the bank, the robber had vanished.

Certainly here appeared to be the typical local crime. There were none of the trade marks of an "outside mob," which, in these days, often plans its robberies hundreds of miles away from its hideout base. This man got small amounts of money, spent them, and then went back to his source of supply for more.

The crime came under a new law passed last year by Congress, providing that the robbery of a national bank or one possessing Federal funds on deposit, should be a Federal offense. The Bureau of Investigation therefore assumed jurisdiction, working in co-operation with local police.

The evidence pointing to a local job caused dragnet after dragnet to be put out through the lodging-house district of Los Angeles, together with the usual raids on poolrooms and other hangouts. Every loiterer was questioned. It all yielded nothing. In the meantime, the Bureau of Investigation, in its painstaking way, sent special agents about the neighborhoods of all branch banks, to enlist the aid of merchants. If an automobile was seen to speed away from a bank, would someone please try to get the license number?

Shortly afterward, an automobile salesman was standing near the Whittier and Lorena Branch of the Bank of America when suddenly a man ran out, jumped into an automobile and sped away. Immediately thereafter a teller ran forth and fired two shots, both aimless. The salesman noted the license tag and turned it over to the Bureau of Investigation. But he had made a mistake—checking by special agents was fruitless.

Two weeks later there occurred one of those coincidences which happen only in real life. A man entered the automobile showroom, approached this particular salesman and told him he'd like to look at a new car. For once the automobile man had some difficulty in dilating upon fuel consumption, pick-up and road ability. His first glance had told him that this was the wanted bank robber.

Salesman Observes Number of License

Perhaps his preoccupation cost him a sale. At any rate, the robber walked out without buying, while this time the salesman noted the license tag with a greater eye to accuracy. And when the special agents got the number they no longer looked for their suspect in Los Angeles. They took an airplane for Salt Lake, Utah, 1,000 miles away, traced the ownership of the car through State records and arrested a Salt Lake filling-station operator. He was Charles Erb Redding, a former convict who had served three terms in State and Federal prisons.

Time after time this man had left his filling station in Salt Lake, driven across Utah, through Nevada and California into Los Angeles, there robbed a bank and driven the 1,000 miles back to his legitimate business. Not once had he even stayed overnight in the California City.

Thus crime has taken on shuttle-like proportions; men living in one State and committing crimes 1,000 miles away, mobsters of one city in direct touch with the mobsters of another, bank robbers hurrying from place to place by fast automobile or airplane that they may contact lawyers, doctors, face lifters, hair dyers, brokers for stolen bonds, purveyors of kidnap money, dealers in gangster guns. The problem of the 10,000 real and 3,000,000 potential public enemies, whose records cram the tremendous Identification Unit in Washington, becomes therefore not so much what to do about crime as how to do it.

Local police, no matter how efficient, can not be expected to catch criminals when, almost immediately, they vanish from their jurisdiction. Detectives can not amass protective knowledge about persons they never before have seen.
